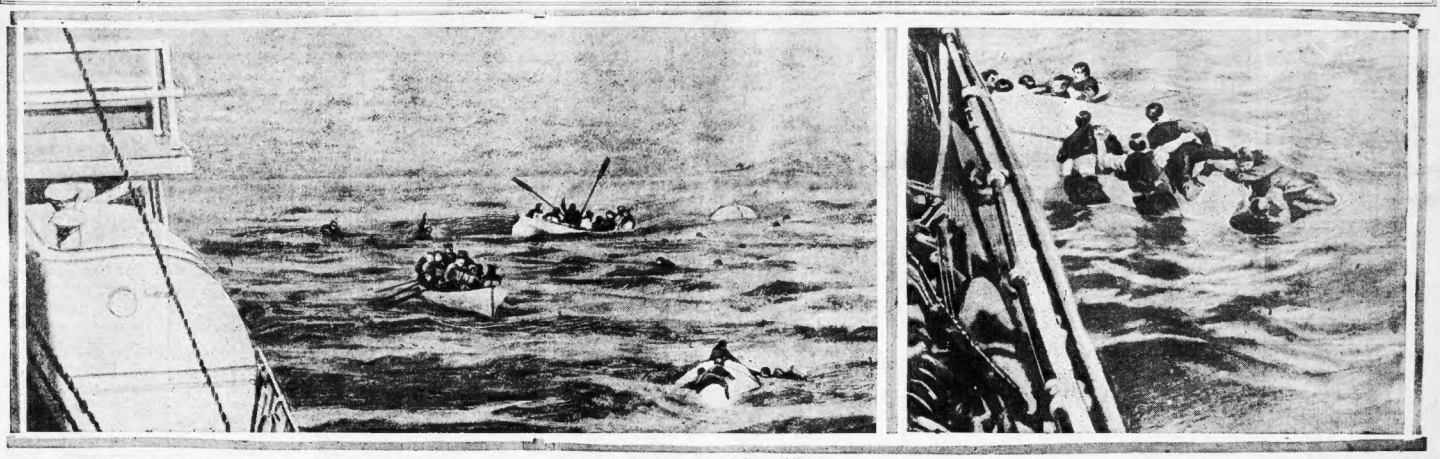
BIG BRITISH STEAMSHIP TORPEDOED

Sinking of Falaba with 112 Men and Women—Greatest Tragedy of Submarine Warfare



Photos Copyright, 1915, by the International News Service.

The photographs show more vividly than any cabled description the fearful scenes that attended the torpedoing of the British merchantman by the German submarine U-28 on March 28. The survivors all agree that the German commander launched his torpedo at 100 yards range, before the ship's company could comply with his order to leave the vessel. As a consequence all but three of the lifeboats foundered, one boat full of passengers being actually half way down the davits when the torpedo struck. Falaba sunk in ten minutes, but many of her people were dead before that. The photographs show three of the overturned boats and the drowning struggles of their passengers in the ice-cold water. If ten minutes longer had been allowed, it is believed, all could have been saved, including the American victim, Leon C. Thresher, of Worcester County, Mass.

These remarkable photographs—the most graphic yet made of the "Submarine War"— were the work of a cool-headed passenger who clung to a plank when the Falaba sunk under him and was rescued an hour later.

BIG BRITISH LINER IS TORPEDOED

LONDON, April 12.—The British liner Wayfarer, a vessel of 9,599 tons, is the latest victim of German's submarine warfare and the largest merchant vessel that has been torpedoed since the war began.

Announcement of the Wayfarer's disaster was made today shortly after news had been received of the destruction of the small steamer Guernsey while it was trying to escape from a submarine in the English Channel.

A message received from Liverpool shortly after 2 p. m. stated that the Wayfarer was in a sinking condition, but was being towed toward Queenstown.

The Wayfarer was torpedoed off the Scilly Islands, where several other ships have been destroyed.

The Guernsey, bringing a cargo from the Channel Islands, was wrecked Friday night while it was attempting to run away from a submarine believed to be the U-31. It crashed at full speed upon rocks almost in the shadow of the lighthouse that had been darkened because of the war.

Seven members of the Guernsey's crew, including Captain Woods, were drowned. The ship, which was 534 tons and hailed from Southampton, went to pieces so quickly that it was impossible to launch more than one boat.

The Wayfarer, built in 1903 at Belfast, is from Liverpool and is known as a "Harrison liner," being owned by the Charnis Steamship Company, Limited, managed by T. & J. Harrison. She is a steel, twin screw four-masted steamer under command of Captain J. Gaudie. She is 505 feet long and had a breadth of 58.2 feet.

ONE DEAD, 2 HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Morry Newhoff of No. 19 Harlem street, Dorchester, a suit manufacturer, with a place of business at No. 94 Arch street, was almost instantly killed and his wife and daughter badly injured, the former perhaps fatally, when a seven-passenger touring car owned and operated by Newhoff overturned at a dangerous curve on the turnpike between Wrentham and Plainville about 9:30 this morning.

The accident was due to the slippery condition of the road, the car first skidding and then overturning, as Newhoff was attempting to avoid collision with an approaching trolley car.

Newhoff, hurled from the car as it made its first plunge, struck on his head. His skull was fractured and he died almost instantly.

His wife and daughter were thrown through the air as the car turned turtle. The former was then thrown several feet down an embankment. Both of her arms were broken. She

THRILLING RESCUES IN CUSHING ACADEMY FIRE; ONE MAN MISSING

ASHBURNHAM, April 12.—Ashburnham House, the new boys' dormitory at Cushing Academy, the co-educational preparatory school, was burned flat early today. The 100 or more boys housed in the two-story building escaped, many after thrilling rescues. Some jumped from windows or slid down ropes.

Frank L. Hardy, chairman of Ashburnham selectmen, and head athletic coach for the Academy, is missing. It is feared that Mr. Hardy perished in the fire.

After helping many of the boys out he returned to telephone, according to Chief Engineer Davis. He has not been seen since he dashed back into the burning building. As soon as the ruins cool search will be made for his body.

Earl Woodward of Northampton jumped from an upper window and was cut on one foot when he landed. A. P. Chittenden of Malden, Leon Ware of East River, Ct., Harold Putnam of Milford and a Porto Rico youth named Souza jumped safely.

The building was erected in 1912 at a cost of $70,000. Chief Engineer Davis estimates the total loss at $50,000. The funds for the building were largely gifts of the late Jacob H. Fairbanks of Ashburnham and Fitchburg.

Mr. Hardy, the missing athlete coach, is one of the best-known basketball experts in New England. He coached the baseball teams at Cushing, but basketball was his specialty. He brought out the famous Cushing team of 1910, which won the New England basketball championship. He was forty years old and married.

Mr. Hardy did not live at the academy, but came to Ashburnham House last night to take the place of one of the proctors who wished to be away.

There are from 175 to 200 boys and girls of "prep" school age attending Cushing Academy. The school is located about one-half mile from the centre of the town.

The new dormitory was located apart from the main academy group, and this isolation undoubtedly saved

LARGEST SHIP FLYING U. S. FLAG GOES ASHORE IN PACIFIC OCEAN

TOKIO, April 12.—Five steamers and two Japanese warships rushed to the assistance of the American liner Minnesota today in response to "S. O. S." wireless calls, stating that the liner was ashore in the inland sea, the long strait separating the island of Nippon from the islands of Kiushiu and Shikoku.

The Minnesota, largest liner on the Pacific Ocean, is reported to have had about 1,500 persons aboard. She was bound from Manila to Seattle when she went ashore. A wireless dispatch this afternoon says the passengers and mails on the Minnesota were transferred to another steamer and are being taken to Shimonaseki. It is believed the ship can be refloated.

BRITISH SEIZE 2 AMERICAN SHIPS

LONDON, April 12.—England's blockade of Germany netted two American victims today. The steamers Joseph W. Pordney and Navajo were captured by British cruisers and taken into Kirkwall, Scotland. The Pordney was bound from New York to Malmo, Sweden, and the Navajo from Galveston to Bremen.

The Pordney, a steamer of 2,458 tons, commanded by Captain Smith, sailed from New York on March 20. While her cargo was consigned to a Swedish port English officials believe that its ultimate destination was Germany. The steamer is owned by the Merida Steamship Company, and its port of registry is Cleveland.

The Navajo sailed from Galveston, March 3. She is of 1,711 tons and commanded by Captain Jacobson. She is owned by the Western Steam Navigation Company and her port of registry is San Francisco.

A severe storm has recently been sweeping Japan, and it is believed that this was responsible for the predicament of the Minnesota, though a wireless dispatch sent from the ship early today said that the weather was calm at that time.

The Minnesota is commanded by Captain Garlick, one of the most capable navigators of the Pacific Ocean. She is a vessel of 13,324 tons and is owned by the Great Northern Steamship Company.

On a recent trip from Seattle to the Orient the Minnesota broke all records for cargo-carrying ships, taking 16,313 tons of cotton, flour and general merchandise.

The liner was built in 1904 at New London, Ct. Because of her great size the Russian government made transport in 1914, but the negotiations fell through.

The Minnesota is the largest merchant ship flying the American flag. She was built to accommodate 2,000 passengers, a crew of 250 men and a cargo of 20,000 tons. She cost $2,000,000.

After she went into commission the Minnesota plied between Seattle and Far East ports. Her sister ship, the Dakota, was wrecked several years ago.

THOUSANDS FALL IN GREAT BATTLE OF WOEVRE; FRENCH ATTACKS REPULSED, BERLIN DECLARES

LONDON, April 12.—The Battle of the Woevre, the most terrific engagement in the western war theatre since the French victory of the Marne, is still undecided, though thousands have fallen on both sides in attacks and counter attacks marked by extreme desperation.

Hold the lines in the Woevre at all costs," is the order Emperor William is said to have sent to his generals.

The German War Office, in a detailed statement issued in Berlin today, asserts that the French attacks have been repulsed with appalling losses to the allies. Paris, while admitting heavy losses, states that the gains attained, especially at Eparges, have more than compensated for the severe casualties.

NEAR FAMOUS FIELD OF GRAVELOTTE.

The great battle of the Woevre is being fought out upon the edge of the battlefield of Gravelotte, where the deciding engagement of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870 took place.

The same strategical roadways which are being fought for now, and the same summits for which the troops are now contesting, were the objects of battle then.

Directly east of St. Mihiel much of the fighting has taken place in woodlands, but further to the north the forests give way to flat ground. Severe storms have turned this level country to morasses of deep, sticky mud, and many charges have been delivered by both Germans and French when the men have sunk into mud nearly to their knees.

GRAPHIC STORY OF BATTLE.

Following is the graphic account of the battle issued by the Berlin War Office today:

"To April 7 French attacks were exclusively directed against both German wings.

(Note: These wings stretch from a point north of Verdun in an irregular line in the forest of Le Pretre, thence to St. Mihiel.)

"Subsequently the French opened attacks against the centre of the German lines. After assembling fresh troops near St. Mihiel on the Meuse River late on the 7th, the first attack against the German centre was made from Selouse wood, five miles north of St. Mihiel, against our position at Seuzey and Lamorville.

"The enemy was repulsed, leaving many dead and wounded upon the field, and in addition we took two officers and eighty private prisoners. During the night of April 7-8 there were artillery actions at several points, particularly at Combres Heights and also between Regniville and Fay-En-Haye. In addition, infantry attacks were repulsed. Two attacks by the French southeast of Verdun, near Marcheville, broke down one hundred yards in front of our lines.

RECAPTURED TRENCHES.

"In the forest of Ailly the French succeeded in recapturing part of the trenches they had lost the day before. An attack delivered at dawn in the Forest Brule and three-night attacks on the western edge of the forest of Le Pretre were repulsed.

"In the afternoon and evening of April 8 the enemy was active at several points on our front. He attempted to advance from Selouse forest, but failed. Severe fighting raged for some time in the village Mormare, the French being repulsed with bayonet.

"Again the French attacked in the forest of La Pretre and other attacks were made near Regniville and south of Orne, but all were repelled. During the night of April 8-9 heavy fighting took place on Combres heights, the French using reserves. The following morning they succeeded in occupying some trenches we had evacuated, owing to the severe artillery fire directed against them. However, these works were not taken without a hot contest.

"During the day we succeeded in driving the French from part of the trenches and we maintained our principal positions in their entirety. A fresh French attack, with superior forces, obliged us to evacuate part of our intrenchments again.

ADVANCE ON HEIGHTS.

"During the night of April 8-9 the remainder of the Woevre front was generally quiet, with the exception of the forest of Mortmare, where the French delivered some unsuccessful attacks. They are chased back into their positions by the Germans, who captured two machine guns. On the following day the French again attacked in that region, but the attacks broke down with extraordinary heavy losses.

"On April 9, the French renewed their assaults against our northern wing, between the Orne River and Combres Heights, in the vicinity of Parfaindrupt and Marcheville. Between noon and midnight four attacks were delivered in front of the Himmelpfort, but all were repulsed with severe losses.

"On the night of April 9-10 French throwers and howitzers were active. In the afternoon of the tenth the French advanced on the whole line against our position on Combres Heights, breaking through at one point and reaching the foot of the slope before the attack broke down under the fire of our second line troops. Our troops maintained possession of Combres heights.

"Part of our advance position was regained through a counter attack. A second French attack was effectively stopped by our artillery fire. During the night the enemy bombarded the village on Combres Heights.

BIG ARTILLERY COMBAT.

"To go back to April 9, on the line between Spada and Seuzey, a series of unsuccessful attacks were made by the French. We took seventy-one prisoners. Minor attacks at Ailly failed. French attacks on the Regniville-Fay-en-Haye line were repulsed with extraordinary losses. At one point north of Regniville we counted 500 dead.

"On the evening of April 9, at Croix des Carmes in the area of the Forest of Le Pretre, we captured three howitzers and two mitrailleuses, eating trenches as well as two machine guns and fifty-nine prisoners.

"On April 10 there was an artillery combat all along the line. Our aerial observers noted that the French were throwing up fresh earthworks, bringing up fresh reinforcements. These were heavily bombarded by us.

"The enemy did not attack at Eparges. At the foot of Combres Heights strong French forces were bombarded by our artillery. On the tenth the French made only one attack on the forest of Le Pretre, and this was repulsed. This day, like all previous ones, ended in complete German success on all fronts. All trenches lost in these fights were recovered with the exception of a small and unimportant portion."

(Note—The French have laid stress upon the importance of their capture of Eparges, but the German report makes no mention of fighting there.)

FRENCH WAR REPORT.

The text of the official war report issued at Paris this afternoon follows:

"No infantry action was reported in Belgium during the day of April 11. On the Ancre, between Albert and the canal, and in Champagne, there were rannonades on both sides.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle we have organized ourselves in the positions conquered in the course of preceding conflicts. The enemy has made no counter attacks.

"On April 10 in the Forest of Ailly and in the Forest of Le Pretre we took five rapid fire guns and a bomb thrower."

RUSSIANS FORGING AHEAD IN HUNGARY

PETROGRAD, April 12.—Russian troops are now twenty miles within Hungary territory, and have reached the valley of the Yung River, south of Uzsok Pass, according to advices received here from the Carpathian front today.

It is asserted at the War Office that the rapid advance of the invading troops will render the position of the Austro-German forces at Uzsok Pass untenable.

The general Russian advance into Hungary through the passes and over the Carpathian crests will be made over a front of 125 miles. Great masses of troops are being carried to this front over the Galician railroads.

In an attempt to lighten the pressure being exerted by the Russians at Uzsok Pass, Austro-German troops have unsuccessfully opened a new offensive in the Oper Valley, about forty. Several divisions have for two days been making violent attacks along Strzj in an attempt to cut the Russian lines of communication. This effort had been foreseen, however, and the attacking forces have suffered heavy losses without gaining any material advantages.

GERMANS RESUME THEIR ADVANCE IN POLAND, SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, April 12.—(By wireless)—Having repulsed the Russian attacks west of the Niemen River in Poland, Field Marshal von Hindenberg's troops have resumed their easterly advance from Mariampol, according to today's official report from the German general staff.

It tells of a new device used by the Russians in their warfare, this being a bomb which does not explode, but develops poisonous gases, with the intention of asphyxiating the troops in whose neighborhood it falls.

"Since an air attack by the enemy killed three women in the open town of Mullheim with bombs," says the official report, "German bombs have been thrown on the centre of Nancy and the fortifications there.

"Captured French officers say that the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the Paris Louvre and Invalides buildings are being used for military purposes, searchlights, wireless apparatus and machine guns having been installed.

"German troops, advancing eastward from Mariampol, captured nine officers and 1,150 Russians killed. They also took four machine guns.

"Northeast of Lomza the Russians threw bombs filled with a new exploding type, but developed only irritating gas."

Turks Massing Troops at Smyrna

ATHENS, April 12.—Preparation for the resumption of the shelling of the Turkish forts defending the Dardanelles by the Anglo-French fleet are in full swing.

During the lull in the bombardments of the Dardanelles and Smyrna the Turks have been working feverishly to strengthen their defences, mounting new guns and transporting troops to points of strategical importance. Almost every day some of the ships of the allied fleet throw shells against the Turkish positions on the European side to prevent the construction of provisional fortifications.

Aviators from the fleet report that the Turks are massing a heavy force of troops at Smyrna, and that for three days the railroad leading to that port city has been congested with trains carrying nothing but soldiers, guns and ammunition. Every available Turk is being sent to the front.

The Turkish defences on Smyrna gulf have been strengthened with twenty guns placed in Fort Castro on Dio Adelphia Heights.

GIRL POSES AS GRAND DUCHESS AND CHARMS HOSPITAL PATIENTS

PETROGRAD, April 12.—Even the Czar smiles today at the audacious prank of Yelina Romanoff, sixteen-year-old daughter of a fruit dealer, who succeeded in passing herself off as a Grand Duchess, one of the daughters of the Emperor, even inspecting a hospital and charming the patients with her kindness.

In the attire of a Sister of Mercy, she deceived all with whom she came in contact at first, and refused the proffer of a special train at Tsarkoe-Selo.

Count Mordvinoff, the Czar's attache, discovered the impostor. She escaped without punishment.

GERMAN NOTE IS HELD AN ATTACK

WASHINGTON, April 12.—"Astounding" is the characterization today given in official quarters to the attack of Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador on the neutrality of the United States.

The memorandum of the German envoy made public today charges this government violates the "real spirit of neutrality" in allowing export of arms to the allies and insisting that Germany be permitted to obtain foodstuffs from this country.

While officials generally believe that the communication does not call for a reply, an answer is being prepared in the State Department. The belief prevails around the State Department that the Kaiser's government in sending this memorandum did not really hope to convince the United States that the opinions expressed in the communication are reasonable and sound. The main purpose of the action was believed to be an effort to obtain the desired results through political reaction in this country.

Ambassador Von Bernstorff, in reply to reports that the publication of the note by the embassy had irritated government officials, declared there was nothing unusual in his action, as all other notes between Berlin and Washington, including the demand for indemnity for the William P. Frye, had been published.

The text of the memorandum follows:

"The different British orders-in-council have altered the universally recognized rules of international law in such a one-sided manner that they entirely suppress the trade of neutral countries with Germany. Already prior to the last order-in-council, the shipment of conditional contraband, especially foodstuffs, to Germany was practically impossible.

VIOLATIONS "ACCEPTED."

"In fact, since the protest which the American government made in London on December 28, 1914, not a single shipment of such goods for Germany has been effected from the United States. Also after the lodging of the protest, as is known, to the German embassy, only one such shipment has been attempted by an American cotton ship which was to go where immediately seized by the British and are still detained at a British port.

"The seizure of an American ship under these circumstances was in contradiction with the recognized principles of international law. Nevertheless, the United States government has not yet obtained the release of the ship, nor has it after eight months of war succeeded in safeguarding the legitimate American trade with Germany. Such delay, especially when the supply of foodstuffs is concerned, seems equivalent to complete failure. It is, therefore, to be assumed that the United States government has accepted England's violations of international law.

"Furthermore there has to be considered the attitude of the United States concerning the question of exportation of war material. The imperial embassy hopes to agree with the government of the United States that with regard to the question of neutrality there is not only the formal side to be considered, but also the spirit in which neutrality is enforced.

AID FOR ALLIES.

"Conditions in the present war are different from those in any former wars. For this reason it is not justified to point at the fact that perhaps in former wars Germany furnished belligerents with war material; because in those former cases the question was not whether any war material was to be furnished to the belligerents, but merely what one of the competing countries would furnish. In the present war with the exception of the United States, all the countries capable of a noteworthy production of war material are either at war themselves or completing their armament and have prohibited the export of war material. Therefore the United States of America is the only country in a position to export war material. This fact ought to give a new meaning of the idea of neutrality, independent of the formal law.

"Instead of this, and in contradiction with the real spirit of neutrality, an enormous new industry of war materials of every kind is being built up in the United States inasmuch as not only the existing plants are being kept busy and enlarged, but also new ones are continually founded.

"In reality, the American industry is supplying only Germany's enemies, a fact which in no way modified by the theoretical willingness to furnish Germany as well, if it were possible."

British Brewers Doubt Sale Report

LONDON, April 12.—Officials of the Brewers' Society today refused to credit reports that the government is contemplating the purchase of all breweries to establish a state monopoly in the making and sale of beer.

"We don't know of any such plan and it sounds ridiculous," read a statement issued at the society's headquarters.

NEW GERMAN RAIDER IN U. S. PORT HAS SUNK 14 VESSELS

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels up to noon had received no request from Captain Thierfelder of the Kron Prins Wilhelm, the German commerce raider which has sought refuge at Newport News after capturing fifteen vessels, fourteen of which she sank, for a survey of his ship, but the Secretary expected to hear at any moment from Admiral Beatty, commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, that the German commander had asked for supplies and time to make repairs. Admiral Beatty, he said, would then appoint a board of survey to determine what repairs were necessary.

Captain Thierfelder has notified the customs officials that it may be necessary for him to invalid some of the members of his crew here because they are suffering from beri-beri.

Captain Thierfelder was asked if he could throw any light upon the fate of the German auxiliary cruiser Karlsruhe, which is reported to have been destroyed at sea, but he said he could not.

The naval tug Pautuxent, which guarded the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, has taken up her position near the Kron Prins Wilhelm and will keep watch over that ship. It was reported that Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, would come here to confer with Commander Thierfelder.

BELIEVE WILHELM WILL INTERN.

Navy officers practically are agreed that the Kron Prins Wilhelm will be interned. They pointed out that it was a simple matter for a fast vessel whose presence was no suspected to slip into Hampton Roads, even though four hostile cruisers were waiting outside the harbor. It would be an entirely different matter, they say, for the raider to get out of Hampton Roads with the warships on guard. The only chance for the raider, the naval experts believe, would be for her to go out in a severe storm.

The sinking of the Norwegian bark Samantha by the Kron Prins Wilhelm is regarded here as a parallel case to the sinking of the American ship William P. Frye by the Prinz Eitel Friedrich. Officers of the Kron Prins Wilhelm declare they were justified in sinking the Samantha, because she carried wheat—a contraband.

As yet the question of the regularity of the Kron Prins Wilhelm's clearance papers when she sail from New York on August 3 has not been called into question, but it may be. Commander Thierfelder cleared his ship for Bremen, but the ship was warned by wireless to discontinue her voyage while at sea and she was then fitted out as a commerce raider.

When Collector Hamilton took Commander Thierfelder back to the ship, there stood on the Wilhelm's deck Commander Thierichens and his staff of the interned Prinz Eitel Friedrich. As Commander Thierfelder reached the deck the two embraced and retired for a consultation. Later, officers of the two German sea raiders dined together and traded accounts of their experiences.

PRISONERS FREE TODAY.

Newspapermen were permitted aboard the ship, but were denied access to the British prisoners, who will be released today.

Officers of the raider say they escaped detection from British cruisers on several occasions. One showed a sketch he had made of a scene when a German coaling ship which was to bring the Prinz Wilhelm coal was captured by British cruisers.

"We could see them take our coal ship and sink her," he said, "but they never saw us. There were no British warships. We got away as soon as we could and never heard of our coal ship or the British ships again."

In his talk with the quarantine officers the German commander said that he narrowly escaped capture by British warships twice, once off the Canary Islands and again off the Azores.

When the German raider was released from quarantine and passed on to their port she steamed past sixteen American battleships in Hampton Roads. The Wilhelm, however, neither saluted nor dipped her flag, a fact which aroused considerable comment among the American sailors.

When the Wilhelm came into port she had less than twenty-five tons of coal and few provisions for the 500 members of her crew and sixty-one prisoners taken from merchant ships sunk by her.

Her armament consisted of four guns, two taken from the German cruiser Karlsruhe and two others captured from the British steamer La Correntina, which she sunk last October.

DID $7,000,000 DAMAGE.

As a German merchant and passenger steamer, the Wilhelm left New York harbor August 3 and has not since touched port. In that time she has destroyed ships whose estimated value is $7,000,000 and taken 360 prisoners.

The story of the 255-day voyage out of New York was graphically told by Over Lieutenant Warenecke, He said:

"We left August 3 and put out into the great big ocean. We were not a warship then, but three days out off the Bermudas we met the German cruiser Karlsruhe. We took from her two 3-inch guns, which we mounted on the bow of the ship, and took Lieutenant-Captain Thierfelder, her navigating officer, to command our ship. We also took seventeen of the Karlsruhe's junior officers and men, took on more coal and provisions and put to sea.

"We made for the Atlantic and the first ship we encountered was the British ship Indian Prince, which we sank September 4, 1914. From that time on we remained on the ocean, destroying the enemy where we might find her.

Lieutenant Warenecke said most of the passengers and sailors taken from British and other allied ships were sent from time to time by German ships to Buenos Ayres, Rio de Janeiro, Pernambuco and Santos. Three hundred and sixty from the French steamer Guadeloupe were sent ashore at Pernambuco.

Pro-War Sentiment Checked at Rome

ROME, April 12.—Six hundred prisoners, arrested in riots caused by pro-war demonstrations in Rome, Brescia, Leghorn, Naples and other cities, were released today on the payment of small fines or with warnings. The firm attitude taken by the government in repressing the riots show that Italy intends to preserve neutrality for the present.

Forty men, forming part of a mob, attempted to approach the residence of Prince Von Buelow, the German Ambassador, were badly injured when troops charged the crowd.

GRIFFITH REPLIES TO HALLOWELL

David W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Tremont Theatre, said today in reply to the statements made in J. Mott Hallowell's letter to Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner O'Meara:

"At the outset permit me to thank Mr. Hallowell for an original departure of manners. He attended the private performance of the play, as he says, by invitation, whereupon he proceeds to thrust a stiletto into the back of his host. Would it not have been better for Mr. Hallowell to have purchased his seat for one of the public performances before asking for the suppression of my play?

"Mr. John B. Schoeffel, proprietor and manager of the Tremont Theatre, has requested me to ask Mr. Hallowell whether he or his supporters will make reimbursement for the losses involved in the closing of the doors.

"Mr. Schoeffel says: 'The Tremont Theatre has a valuation of $500,000; the only means of meeting our expenses is by presenting lawful dramatic entertainment. I saw "The Birth of a Nation" film a week ago and found it free from immorality and obscenity—a private judgment in which (I am glad to say) the city authorities agree with me.

"'After forty years' experience as a theatrical producer and manager, I am disgusted with the attitude of Mr. Hallowell and his people in trying to interfere with property rights. The theatrical business has been in a deplorable condition and for the first time in many years we were obliged to close the Tremont Theatre as early as March.

"'But for "The Birth of a Nation," which was the only good attraction available, 127 of my help—good Boston citizens—would be out of employment now.

"'I purposely kept out of this controversy till the properly constituted authorities had proved that I was lodged in presenting this play. Now that the authorities have decided that I am within my legal rights I will be quick to take any action to preserve the same.'"

Radcliffe Girls Warned to Stay Through Lectures

The hop, skip and jump will no longer be recognized as Radcliffe's favorite athletic plan to cut short lecture hours, for the Student Government Association declares that the college office recognizes no definite time for leaving classes and offenders may be classed as not in attendance should they cut their studies before the "all out" bell rings. The Government Association poster, which is a surprise to many not in the habit of complying with it, says:

"Classes are expected to wait for their instructor. The hour belongs to him. Anyone leaving before the end of the hour does so at her own risk."

FIGHT STOCK WATERING PLOT IN B. & M. REORGANIZATION BILL

Determined opposition to the stock-watering possibilities and other extraordinary financial features of the reorganization bill of the Boston & Maine Railroad threatens the fate of the entire bill.

As an instrument calculated to meet a railroad crisis, the bill is admitted to be an "extraordinary" document. But aside from its general features, the bill is found to have been liberally supplied with elusive "jokers" that will permit of stock watering and financial gains for the underwriters and an almost absolute evasion of the stringent railroad laws and policies of the State.

When the bill is considered tomorrow in its final draft by the Committee on Railroads, unyielding opposition will be presented against these four conspicuous features of the bill which permit:

(1.) Leased lines to consolidate with other lines without proper supervision by the Public Service Commission.

(2.) Leased lines to issue stock and securities without adequate supervision by the Commission.

(3.) Unreasonable fees to be paid to the underwriters.

(4.) Unwise investments in railroad securities by savings bank.

There will also be a determined opposition against the inclusion of the Hampden Railroad in the reorganization bill.

REVOLUTIONARY PLAN.

Particular opposition is manifest against section 25 of the bill, the so-called lease lines section that was finally incorporated into the bill after various conferences between the Committee on Railroads, the Public Service Commission and with Philip Dexter and Everett W. Burdett representing respectively the Boston & Lowell and the Fitchburg Railroads, the more prominent of the leased lines. According to United States District Attorney George W. Anderson, this section is a "wonderful creation and is thoroughly revolutionary," and Mr. Anderson's friends say he is thoroughly opposed to its financial possibilities.

This extraordinary section provides that in case the Boston & Maine should default on any of its obligations to the leased lines, those lines could dispose of themselves to any railroad they may elect. The law has never allowed, either in Massachusetts or any other part of the country, two railroads or leased lines to consolidate with one another without special legislative sanction, except under unusual circumstances, to this writer the proposal of section 25 is without precedent and quite revolutionary.

In addition to this, the section is found to open the door to possible stock watering. By its terms it apparently allows the leased lines to issue any amount of stock or bonds which may be necessary to effect the consolidation or lease which is contemplate, and the only control which the Public Service Commission has over these issues is as to whether the amount of stock issued is necessary for the purpose of effecting the consolidation.

STATE UNPROTECTED.

Either the leased lines or the Boston & Maine could pretend that they would not consolidate unless more was a great stock-watering of securities. Yet the Public Service Commission could not say that it was necessary to accomplish the deal.

This section also fails to protect the State against the repetition of the New Haven's well-known financial venture under the power granted to it by the State of Connecticut and which Massachusetts was powerless to prevent. If the Boston & Maine should fail to consolidate with the leased lines and should go to a railroad chartered outside of Massachusetts, there is imminent danger that the consolidated railroad would be subject to less stringent laws than prevail in Massachusetts.

Of the two other matters in substantial dispute, one is the question of underwriting fees. As the bill now stands there is no provision restricting the amount of the fees. While it is difficult to provide adequate supervision over these fees, there is felt to be a necessary demand for some method, automatic or otherwise, of preventing an unconscionable charge for underwriting the new issues of securities which will be necessary under reorganization.

The most serious difficulty left unsettled, except Section 25, is the provision relating to the safeguarding of the savings banks. Under the general law underwriters cannot dump upon the savings banks any securities that have not paid dividends of four per cent. for five successive years. Under the existing reorganization bill, the bars are thrown down and savings banks are opened wide for the investment in the securities of the new corporation when they pay dividends of 4 per cent. on only half their capital stock and indebtedness for but one year. The bill does not provide that these dividends shall be earned as well as paid.

DIVIDENDS UNEARNED.

Voicing their opposition to a dangerous and loose provision, the protestants point out that the New Haven and the Boston & Maine have paid dividends that they did not earn, but that they have paid them out of borrowed money for a number of years. The purpose of requiring stock to pay "honest" dividends before it becomes a savings bank investment is to make it a safe stock for the bank and for the people who deposit money in the bank.

Recent disclosures show that corporations are tempted to pay dividends they do not earn. These unscrupulous transactions open the way to unload the securities onto the savings banks. Depositors in the banks cannot always rely upon the judgment, the honesty or the independence of the trustees. Business affiliation of one kind or another frequently place the trustees under the control of big underwriting banking houses. The influence thus exerted compels the trustees to invest in securities of questionable value or perhaps absolutely worthless.

In addition to those financial features and the section which gives the leased lines, and at present the Boston & Maine, unqualified authority to consolidate and issue securities without proper supervision by the Public Service Commission, further opposition is raised against the Hampden, which the commission actually found to be loaded down with graft.

In the original bill submitted by the Federal-appointed trustees the Hampden was included. In the present bill it has been found no resting place. But before the railroad committee is through with it, the representative of the Hampden will make further attempt to foist the Hampden onto the stockholders of the Boston & Maine. In that event, the safety of the entire bill will again be threatened.

The railroad lobby has disappeared. There is no evidence of any lobby in behalf of the bonds in Mason at the State House this year. There is a lobby of the unemployed, however, headed by Senator Thomas H. Gay and including a number of the Democratic members of the Legislature. Senator Gay is still a dominating factor in legislation.

VETO THREAT.

Governor Walsh has spent considerable time with the purpose of perfecting the bill. His purpose is to secure the removal of the objectionable financial and other conspicuous features in order that he may sign the bill without hesitation. Governor Walsh has also served notice upon those responsible for the bill that if it contains features too objectionable he will veto it.

As a result of the insistence of Governor Walsh, Representative Edward A. Hamblin, Democratic floor leader, Mr. Anderson and Louis D. Brandeis, other objectionable features of the bill were eliminated before the redraft was composed. The Hampden was a notable feature. Professor Ripley of Harvard bobbed into the limelight and suggested a little device which would have permitted the capitalization of premiums amounting in $2,500,000, but Mr. Anderson, Representative Hamblin, Chairman Frederick J. Macleod and Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman finally succeeded in having the scheme stricken from the bill. Incidentally the Public Service Railroad Commission stood firm in its boots in that State, and it finally become imperative for all hands to relieve the bill of its capitalization-of-premiums burden.

It is a further matter of comment that the Republicans who constitute the majority of the committee have manifested no partisan disposition to put the Governor in a hole by loading down the bill with schemes so injurious that the Governor would be obliged to veto it, even at the risk of the financial and transportation chaos that will undoubtedly result if the reorganization bill is not passed at this session.

NORA BAYES, music comedy singer, divorced from Harry Prince. It is her third broken romance.

NORA BAYES WINS THIRD DIVORCE

Nora Bayes, the actress, has been granted a divorce in New York from Harry Prince, stage name Harry Clarke, her dancing partner, whom she secretly married in 1913, a few months after she divorced Jack Norworth. She brought her suit under the name of Eleanor K. Prince and her complaint inclined a woman whose name was not made public. This makes the actress' third divorce.

Boston friends of the clever singer and musical comedy entertainer were surprised Friday to learn that she had brought a divorce suit against Prince, or Clarke. As soon as the case was filed in the New York courts it was given to a referee and the papers were sealed.

Dispatches today from New York said that Justice Guy had granted the actress' suit, thus ending the third romance of her life.

TO AID AMERICANS NOW AT TAMPICO

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Officials today had under consideration a plan to send an army transport to Tampico to bring back to the United States some 200 Americans, who have appealed to the State Department for lifting off the port ready to give assistance if needed.

Much interest was shown in the challenge of General Villa to General Obregon to come out from Celaya and fight in the open. It was interpreted as indicating that neither side had gained a decisive victory at this point, although dispatches to Washington from the newest agent from both Carranza and Villa agrees have claimed on the battlefield hereafter.

The State Department received a request from the Carranza consul at San Antonio that Ignacio Huerta, the former Mexican dictator, be arrested for exile in the United States, but no indication as to what the administration would do in the matter was given.

His principal ailments are sore feet, caused by chafing from Sahara rheumatism and frosbite. The doctors expect him to recover and have the use of his feet again. Russell's wife, who had reported him to the Hudson police as missing, is here ready to accompany him home as soon as his condition permits.

No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils will open, air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. NEW FACES ON 'ELAINE' FILMS

THE "New Exploits of Elaine" begin with the introduction of a most valuable added member of the cast. Edwin Arden, who plays the part of a Chinaman, the master mind in a newly laid train of secret villainy, is one of the sterling actors of the American stage. His impersonates Wu Fang. Well is the master villain named, for he is serpentine in his cunning, his swiftness and his ability to hide. Moreover, like the wily intriguer of the previous "Exploits of Elaine," he has chosen a personal design of his own which appears on documents he scatters. Because of that characteristic the first of the "New Exploits of Elaine" bears the title, "The Serpent Sign."

With the passing of the man who was alternately her lover and her deadly foe, Elaine blooms as a flower that has lived beneath clouds, expands and grows more fragrant in unaccustomed sunshine. Craig Kennedy, too, is happier.

Kennedy and Walter James accompany Elaine to the little house in the country occupied by her old nurse and once owned by Perry Bennett. Instantly the detective's keen eyes noted the similarity between the plan he had found among the traitorous lawyer's papers and the fireplace. Pressing his finger along the side of the fireplace he discovers a spring, which, pressing, he moves the firelogs backward and discloses a trapdoor leading to a sub-cellar.

Guided by a map of subterranean passages within which was hidden $7,000,000 of illgotten wealth, placed there by Perry Bennett, the detective is about to recover the gold when the escape of noxious gas fells him and Jameson. Becoming alarmed by their long absence Elaine goes below. As she recovers her valiant friends lying unconscious on the floor she is cappled by a masked man of serpentine strength and demoniacal cry. In the struggle that follows Elaine detaches a mask which rebuses an earthen wall. The inmate of the revives the two men. The combatant of the mighty arms vanishes, but he has taken with him the box containing the laws heard

VERDI'S REQUIEM AT THE SYMPHONY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

No more brilliant performance of Verdi's "Requiem" was ever given in Boston than that which occurred last night at Symphony Hall, as a beginning to the music festival with which the Handel and Haydn Society is observing its century of existence.

This wonderful composition is rarely given under ideal conditions. Verdi wrote for a huge chorus and soloists of the very front rank. Thus when the Boston Opera Company had it three years ago with Maria Rappold, Maria Gay, John MacCormack and Jose Mardones, the solo parts were well sung, but the chorus was too small and inadequately rehearsed. Last night there was the great chorus of the society, which had been working upon the amazing choruses for some time, and these splendid soloists: Alma Gluck, Margaret Matzenauer, Paul Althouse and Arthur Middleton, all connected with the Metropolitan Opera House. Emil Mollenhauer conducted, F. G. Tucker was at the organ and there was a large orchestra.

As might have been expected, there was a very large audience, for a concert of such dimensions is a rare occasion. The incomparable beauties of the "Requiem" were admirably displayed. Mollenhauer combined with fine enthusiasm and perfect precision, the chorus never sang better and the soloists were all in fine form.

On Tuesday night occurs the most novel feature of the festival, "Morven of the Grail," an oratorio composed for the occasion by Horatio Parker. On this occasion Caroline Hudson Alexander, Florence Mulford, Lambert Murphy and Clarence Whitehall Wednesday night there will be a miscellaneous program with Anita Rio, Lambert Murphy, Christine Miller and Earl Cartwright, and Thursday night "Elijah" will be given.

ASKS $975,000 TO REPAIR ST. PAUL'S

St. Paul's Cathedral, Tremont street, will be reconstructed at an outlay of $975,000.

Bishop Lawrence has issued a circular to the parishes of his diocese, in which he states:

"We do not know how long the cathedral may remain where it is. That depends upon conditions of transit and population; we cannot foresee—perhaps 100 years, perhaps only fifty, perhaps 250 or more. I am quite sure the diocese would rather make its gift to something that is permanent than towards a building that may be torn down in a few generations.

"The chapter of the cathedral has taken up with my suggestion that the cost of reconstruction, perhaps $975,000, be raised. This done, we shall have a cathedral—a diocesan centre house.

"The time of financial stress and war is the time for serious thought and high hopes, though not usually for large gifts.

"May I ask the diocese to lay plans for such gifts as you are able to make them?"

James Madison—"Father of the Constitution"

THE FOURTH PRESIDENT of the United States considered it a greater honor to be declared the Father of the Constitution than to have been elected twice to the highest office in the gift of his countrymen. No more ardent, intelligent, far-sighted and constant student of governmental problems ever lived than Madison. They were his life-long passion. He it was who labored with all his gigantic ability and indomitable will to have deeply imbedded in our National Law those vital principles which forever guarantee to all Americans Religious, Commercial and Personal Liberty. In private life he was genial and social—yet temperate. Many a foaming glass of good barley-malt beer he drank with his bosom friend Thomas Jefferson—"Father of the Declaration of Independence." Madison died at 85 and Jefferson at 83, both were unalterably opposed to tyrannous Prohibition Laws, and advocated legislation which encouraged the brewing industry. Upon the tenets of the Constitution of the U.S.A. (to which Madison devoted the best of his genius) Anheuser-Busch 58 years ago founded their great institution. To-day 7500 people are daily required to produce and market their honest brews. Their chief brand Budweiser is sold throughout the civilized world—the drink of your forefathers—the drink of the noblest men who ever lived—the drink of the great triumphant nations. Budweiser sales exceed any other beer by millions of bottles.

Visitors to St. Louis are courteously invited to inspect our plant—covers 142 acres.

WOMEN TO GET OUT SUFFRAGE EDITION OF SATURDAY AMERICAN

Next Saturday is the day.

Keep the date in mind—APRIL 17—and have your pennies ready to buy the big campaign supplement which the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association is to issue in conjunction with the Boston AMERICAN.

It will be a woman's newspaper. Women will write all the copy—save a few scattered articles by male contributors—and women will do the editing and arrange the features and women will sell the special number, too.

Every woman suffrage organization in New England has taken hold to make the AMERICAN'S Woman Suffrage Edition a success. Prominent society women will sell the Suffrage Edition in the streets. They will become "newsies" as others of their fold have been reporters and wielders of blue pencils for days.

SERIOUS BUSINESS.

The publication of this special supplement is not a pastime for the advocates of woman suffrage. It is the most serious kind of business. It is a distinct departure in New England journalism. It has as its motive the education of the voters of Massachusetts.

Whether or not the women shall be given the same ballot privileges as the men will be determined by the men at the polls next Fall. The champions of the cause succeeded in overcoming all sorts of obstacles and the prejudices due to ignorance of their issues and aims, and finally, got the Legislature to agree to permit them to place the matter before the voters at the next election.

Now they are out to explain a few things to male voters. They are anxious to get the ear of every citizen in the Commonwealth. There are arguments they wish to advance. It is a big job. Nobody realizes that better than the plucky women who have carried the fight to its present promising stage.

WHAT IT REALLY MEANS.

They want the voters and the people of the State at large, both sexes and all ages, to learn what woman suffrage really means. They want them to appreciate the advantages. They want to convince them that briefly it comes down to a simple question of fair play, of equal privileges, of the bestowal to woman of opportunities that are her inherent right.

They wish to sweep away the false notions and the cobwebs of bigotry and indifference and to arouse public enthusiasm in a movement that they say will not only aid their sex but will be an enduring benefit to humanity. Women orators are stumping the State and will visit the ballot boxes oneo. Literature is being scattered broadcast and, as part of the campaign, the members of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association have prepared a supplement in a Boston newspaper would be a splendid medium.

That was how it happened that the editors of the Boston AMERICAN agreed to reserve at least eight pages, and probably more, of next Saturday's big edition for the women to fill and feature as they please. And the editors and reporters who get out the regular editions of the AMERICAN will have nothing whatever to do with the Woman's Suffrage Supplement. That will be exclusively a woman's production to be issued jointly with the AMERICAN.

There will be articles by women and poems by women and drawings and cartoons by women and as one in many alluring features, a dozen Governors in States now enjoying woman suffrage will tell the voters of Massachusetts what they are missing and what a grave blunder they will make if they don't vote right next Fall.

THE WOMEN IN CHARGE.

The Suffrage Edition will be issued under the auspices of the following named:

Prince of Wales Saves a German; Court-Martialed

LONDON, April 12.—The Prince of Wales recently saved a German prisoner taken at St. Eloie from being shot as a spy under circumstances that led to a court-martial inquiry to investigate the charge made by a Major Deane against the Prince of "committing an act gravely violating military discipline."

The Prince was sent with dispatches to Major St. Deane, the officer commanding a village near St. Lioie. On the Prince's arrival he saw a German being led off to be shot as a spy. Asking the reason, the Prince was told the man had been found in the English lines wearing an English officer's overcoat, and that he was trying to make his way back to the German lines when captured.

The Prince spoke to the German in his own language and learned that the man had become detached from a German patrol and was simply endeavoring to rejoin his own lines when he was taken prisoner. He had taken the coat, he said, from a dead English officer, as he had lost his own, and had no intention of acting as a spy. The Prince believed the man's story, and asked the English lieutenant in charge of the firing squad to send the German to the local prisoner's camp and to have his case inquired into.

The matter ended by the Prince taking the German in his motor car to Major Deane, to whom he reported the whole occurrence.

Major Deane informed the Prince that whether the man was a spy or not the Prince had no right to interfere with the lieutenant, who was carrying out definite instructions, and that he would be compelled to report to the British headquarters that the Prince had used his rank as the son of the sovereign to prevent these instructions being carried out.

As a result of Major Deane's report, a court-martial was held which resulted in the Prince being severely criticized and suspended from duty for three days. This sentence was passed as a matter of discipline, for the court-martial was satisfied the prisoner was not a spy and he has been sent to England as an ordinary prisoner of war.

Kaiser Sends Imitation Gift to Avoid Risk

BERLIN, April 12.—Emperor William's gift for the Brooklyn singing society which won the imperial prize at a saengerfest is now ready for shipment.

To avoid capture by the British an imitation has been made and this will be sent to Brooklyn while the real prize will be kept in Germany until the conclusion of the war. The gift is in the form of a shield, silver plated, and rich with relief work designed by Professor Otto Roholoff. The has relief represents Apollo playing a harp, surrounded by the German and American coats of arms. It also bears a picture of the Kaiser.

Germans Gather 550 Aircraft to Raid England

PARIS, April 12.—Five hundred and fifty Zeppelins and aeroplanes have been assembled by the Germans for a raid over England in June, according to information just brought to Paris.

The ministry of foreign affairs today gave out a statement from a Spanish traveler who has returned from Germany, saying that everybody there is predicting the greatest air raid over England in June, in which 150 Zeppelins and 400 aeroplanes, all fitted with aluminum motors, will take part.

Seton Finds War Hurts Boy Scouts

Amsterdam Orders German Ship Away

AMSTERDAM, April 12.—The German steamer Main, suspected of being a supply ship for submarines, was ordered to leave port today, and sailed for Antwerp.

10,000 STAND UP AT SUNDAY'S CALL

PATERSON, N. J., April 12.—Emphasized by reverberating crashes of thunder, blinding flashes of lightning, and the ceaseless drumming of a downpour of rain on the thin roof of the tabernacle, Billy Sunday's sermon picturing the biblical warning that broke up the feast of Belshazzar took such powerful hold on the capacity gathering in the Tabernacle that women fainted, others became hysterical and at the conclusion over ten thousand stood up at Sunday's call for penitents.

The meeting was the most dramatic the city has ever seen. Never had the elements given more impressive assistance to a preacher of repentance. Few preachers have ever taken better advantage of the unusual accompaniement played by the thunder storm.

Sunday's voice carried above the monotone of the drumming of the rain. The thunder claps interrupted him, seeming to point with terrific effectiveness the warnings from the pulpit.

Ushers quietly carried out two women and one man who fainted. After one terrific thunder peal, Sunday shouted: "That is one of the devil's fuses blowing out!"

He did not ask his penitents to "hit the sawdust trail." He merely asked them to stand up as a mark of their repentance. The multitude arose, and then seemed to press, as one person, toward the pulpit, to shake hands with the preacher, now disheveled and nearly dropping from exhaustion from his tremendous efforts.

CLIMBS ON PULPIT.

He had stripped off his coat, first, then his vest and his collar. He ended by climbing to his knees on the top of the pulpit, offering up a remarkable prayer of thanks.

Sunday's description of the Feast of Belshazzar, for which nature furnished the stage setting of thunder, lightning and rain, was as follows:

"A royal feast had been proclaimed by Belshazzar. Chariots were driven by fiery-eyed steeds, that stamped and reared and plunged, and their charioteers would drive and whirl them around the corners, and there were thousands of lords and women dressed in all the glory of that Syrian age at the banquet.

"And suddenly a strange conceit enters the head of Belshazzar, and he calls to him his steward, and he leaves the banquet hall followed by a retinue of servants and when they return they carry in their arms the vessels of gold and silver which Nebuchadnezzar, his grandfather, had taken from the temple in Jerusalem, which vessels were part of the worship of God. Now his hatred of Jehovah he ordered them to fill them with Babylonish wine. They quaffed their cups to the praises of the gods of wood and iron and brass, and sneered at the God of Goda, Jehovah.

DESCRIBES "OLD BEL."

"The hilarity grew, the voices louder and louder. Faster and faster flew the feet of their dancing girls that wriggled and squirmed up and down beneath the table and spun on their heels and toes, and did their wriggling, squirming dances that in our day we call the turkey trot and the grizzly bear and other God-forsaken hell-born dances.

"Suddenly a hush like death fell over the blasphemous, idolatrous, drunken crew, and they gazed in transfixed silence while from the atmosphere they saw an armless hand. On the plaster on the wall of the banquet hall it wrote letters that glowed like fire. Cold terror seized on that blasphemous crew, for they realized that they were standing before supernatural power. Belshazzar's countenance changed, his thoughts were troubled, the joints of his loins were loose, his knees smote one upon the other and I'll tell you old Bel was about in that night.

"When the soothsayers failed to read the writing on the wall terror again seized Belshazzar and the drunken crowd, and presently he sent for his mother.

"Then his mother, the Queen, and she said to him: 'Oh, King, live forever, and let not thy thought trouble you; there is a young man named Daniel, of the Hebrew extraction, and he can read all this. Don't worry. Send for Daniel.'

"I imagine when he came I can see him run up to him and grab him and say, 'Put it here, I am mighty glad to see you; see that writing on the wall? Well, it has my goat.

Auto Crash at Wrentham Fatal

also sustained serious internal injuries. Her daughter, Nellie, was flung head-first against a stone wall. One of her legs was broken. She suffered multiple abrasions about the body.

WIFE DANGEROUSLY INJURED.

The two women were placed on a train which left Wrentham at 5:34 and hurried to the Haymarket Square Relief Station, Boston.

Upon arrival at the hospital Mrs. Newhoff's name was immediately entered on the "dangerous list." Her daughter's condition is not regarded as so serious.

With his wife and daughter injured Newhoff was motoring to Providence on a pleasure trip when the accident occured. Owing to the muddy condition of the roads they were following the car-tracks when they reached a sharp curve about two miles south of Wrentham. As they made the curve an electric car approached in the opposite direction.

MACHINE SKIDS AND OVERTURNS.

Thereupon Newhoff attempted to steer aside. The machine skidded several yards, then suddenly shot into the air. As it turned the three occupants were scattered in different directions.

The trolley car was stopped a few yards further on, the passengers and crew leaping out and hurrying to the aid of the motorists. Newhoff's body was carried into a neighboring house. His injured wife and daughter were assisted into another.

Dr. Hussey and Dr. Jencks of Wrentham were summoned by telephone, both speeding to the scene in autos. Upon their orders Mr. Newhoff and her daughter were later sent to Boston. They were speeded up on the Wrentham depot in an auto where connections were made with a train which left at 5:34. This train, upon arrival at the South Station, at 11 o'clock, was met by two ambulances from the Relief Hospital.

Newhoff's body will be brought home this afternoon, after being viewed by Medical Examiner Bragg of Foxboro. There are five children in the Newhoff family.

Second U. S. Warship Goes to San Domingo

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The cruiser Des Moines today was ordered by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to proceed immediately to San Domingo to protect Americans and their interests there. The order was issued on request of Minister Sullivan. The cruiser Tacoma is already at San Domingo.

Minister Sullivan, in explanation of his appeal for help, said new political disturbances had developed in the republic and the presence of another warship was desirable.

COBB HOPES TO LEAD FOR 2 YEARS

DETROIT, Mich., April 12.—Ty Cobb dropped into a newspaper office the other night and picked up "A History of Baseball" and ran through the batting records that form the high lights of diamond history. He was especially interested in Hans Wagner's eight years at the top of the National League, a record which Cobb tied in 1914.

"There isn't anything I wouldn't give to lead the league just two years more," said Tyrus. "I don't know whether I can do it or not, but to be the best batter in a major league for ten years would be enough to satisfy any man. It sure would suit me.

"If there is anything more for which I would give almost anything, it would be to beat Lajoie's batting average of .422 in 1901. I got .420 in 1911, and there were two games in which I didn't play that I might have. I don't know that they would have boosted my average, but I can't help thinking that it was up a big chance. I certainly was a fortunate batter that year."

While glancing over the records Cobb's eye fell on a passage that introduced the story of his performances, and he read it over several times. It ran as follows:

"Cobb is the only batsman of the time with the possibility of passing Wagner's world record of batting batted over .300 eighteen consecutive years. He is a wonderful batsman in point of ability, but has not the physique to warrant hope that he will be able to stand the strain of major league playing as well as the four giants—Wagner, Anson, Brouthers and Lajoie—who must lead him in the point of continuous service."

"I wonder if that is true," mused Cobb. "I know that folks expect me to break down under the strain of the game, and maybe I will. But I really think that my manner of training in the Winter is conserving my strength. I know this much: I have been playing ball eleven years now, and if next year I shall have been easier for me to get into condition and keep in shape than it was when I was younger. I seem to be really getting in better condition each year.

"One can't tell how long that will be true, though. Maybe they are right, and I will crack some day. One thing is certain, anyway. I am not going to slacken the pace I have set as long as I have strength to set it up unless I should voluntarily retire, as I hope to do after a few years."

Brazil Produces Javelin Marvel for Wolverines

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 12.—Brazil has sent a freshman to the architectural department of the University of Michigan whom Trainer Farrell hopes to develop into a star with the javelin.

Roman E. Martins is the South American's name, and Trainer Farrell ran across him under the stadium stand bleachers tossing the long spear around 125 feet, despite the handicap of the arches overhead.

The youngster is said to have a mark of 160 feet in prep school, and Farrell expects the Wolverines will have a real artist in this novel event this season.

Mrs. Willard Tells How Jess Won Title

Champion Shares Honors With Wife

Photograph taken especially for the Boston AMERICAN.

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—Jess Willard undoubtedly has a clear claim to the title of the world's championship, but just the same he must share the title with another, for he did not win that great fight in Havana last Monday alone.

He was aided just as much as much as though there was a third fighter in the ring helping him, and when he sent that huge right fist of is crashing to the jaw of Jack Johnson, knocking the big black out, his victory was due as much to the unseen presence as to his own efforts.

Mrs. Jess Willard made her husband champion of the world. In a letter she received from him today he told her that during every minute of that terrific battle of a week ago he was thinking of her and the plans they have made for the future of their children. He gave her credit for having prepared him for the triumph.

Jess gives me too much for his success, but I am glad to share the championship with him if he wants it that way, said Mrs. Willard. I am glad that I have been able to help him, but just remember that Jess is naturally a good, clean living man and it has not taken any effort on my part to keep him in the right path.

He says I was with him in his thoughts every minute during the battle; well, I was with him in spirit, too, and I am a mighty happy woman to think that he has worked himself to the championship of the world.

BELIEVES IN PLAIN LIFE.

There is never any danger of Jess going the way so many champions have gone. He will not be led into fast company just because he has to associate with a lot of sporting men.

Jess has good stock in him, has lived a simple, honest life, but best of all he loves his wife and children and will keep his name clean on their account.

Jess has never cared for the fast life that has shortened the careers of so many fighters. He and I have talked that phase of the fighting life over many times and he has agreed with me that we must just remain plain simple folks as we have been ever since we left the farm in Kansas after he took up pugilism.

I do not object to his being a fighter. I have always been confident that he would one day win the championship and he says it was my confidence in him that has helped him maintain the object of his ambition.

ALWAYS SURE JESS WOULD WIN.

Both Jess and I were sure he would win when he left here to make arrangements for the fight with the promoters in New York. We never made any plans in the event of his losing. All of our plans were made with a view to his winning that fight.

"You see we have four children, three girls and a baby boy, Jess, Jr., sixteen months old. Jess wanted to earn money with which to give our children an education. We plan to buy a stock farm in the middle west. I shall live here if Jess continues fighting and we shall send the children to good schools and later to college.

Jess is an ideal husband and father. He is seldom away from home when he can be here.

Love him. Why bless you, I just idolize Jess. He is no more than a big, clean-hearted boy. He delights in getting out here with the youngsters and rolling and tumbling about in the grass with them. They think he is the greatest man in the world and I am quite sure they are right.

SHAKE-UPS DUE IN YALE'S CREWS

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 12.—Both the Yale first and second crews have been given a week's rest following their rugged races against University of Pennsylvania. The arrangement of one of the hardest events of the season for as early as the first week in April is an experiment, and the physical effects on the Yale oarsmen are being awaited.

There is no sign that there will be any unfavorable results. In spite of the fact that the two races were rowed in a genuine blizzard, not a member of the two crews suffered even a cold.

Coach Guy Nickalls adopted the policy of dismissing the oarsmen for a week following the Pennsylvania races. Although the oarsmen returned to college the middle of this week, there has been no varsity rowing, the members of the two regular crews assisting in the coaching of the class oarsmen.

It is believed the oarsmen will show no effects whatever of their two hard races when they meet today for the reorganization of the squad in which really the beginning of the final stage of the season, the formation for the Harvard regatta.

All Spring three eights have been kept at work on the harbor, but the third crew has been disbanded for the season. Several of its members will remain in training as substitutes for the first and second eights and considerable of a shake-up of both the first and second crews is expected this week.

Tony Morse made an excellent showing at stroke in the race against Pennsylvania, and Henry Coe, who was favored for that position, will have an uphill task to crowd Moran from the seat. Coe has been ill with rheumatism, but is expected to resume practice this week.

English to Continue Cricket Despite Loss

LONDON, April 12.—The annual report of the Notts Country Cricket Club shows them to be the only county so far to make a profit on last year's working, finishing the season with £800 in hand. Derbyshire showed a loss of £1,650 on the season, while Leicestershire finished £1,930 on the wrong side. The London clubs have decided to carry on the game this Summer in spite of the war. Their teams will be composed of players not eligible for service.

'Dummy' Taylor to Umpire with Whistle

"Dummy" Taylor, former pitcher for the New York Giants, will be one of the Kansas State League umpires for the coming season, according to Roy Gafford, president of the league.

In calling his decisions, Taylor will use a whistle, blowing once for strikes and twice for balls. A special code will be worked out for base decisions.

HORSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Shake boys! The Braves are back in Boston once again, and, believe me, it is a real treat to give the scenery in these parts the "once over." I have, of course, spent many enjoyable days in Boston since the 1914 baseball campaign closed, but today is the first time that the entire gang has been here since we received our share of the world's series spoils last Fall. We battle the Harvard baseball team at Fenway Park this afternoon, while we engage in a little skirmish with the ball tossers from Brown tomorrow. We will then be ready for our opening game of the season with the Phillies on Wednesday.

* * *

It is six weeks since the Braves started their training at Macon, Ga. During this time we have accomplished wonders on the diamond and are in 100 per cent. better condition today than we were a year ago. We may not be only a fair ball club, but "Boss" Stallings soon developed us into a wonderful, aggressive machine, which ultimately swept all before it in the National League pennant fight and then went in and defeated the Mackmen in the world's series.

* * *

Our training trip was a quiet, orderly affair. There was an abundance of well known "pep" everywhere that we went, but there were few accidents or changes in our lineup. This was naturally very pleasing to us all. Sherwood Magee was the only man on the team who met with any serious setback. Shortly after we arrived at Macon, the fence buster fell and injured his right shoulder while trying to get under a high fly ball. He was obliged to wear a special harness on his injured shoulder for several weeks.

* * *

The average big league ball player would have remained out of the lineup for at least ten days if he had been in Magee's place, and he would have been justified in doing so. Magee, however, is not the kind of player who delights in spending his time in hotel lobbies while the rest of the boys are out at the ball park. Consequently he was out in uniform two days after his injury. He was unable to throw a ball, while he was not able to take his customary healthy swing at the horsehide, but he was glad to be with the squad.

* * *

This little incident is a typical example of what happens when any of the players on our club are injured. They do not ask for long layoffs but report for duty each day, provided that they are able to get to the ball park. This is a fine spirit for any club to have and it is always certain to bring success to the team.

* * *

The Braves are bubbling over with confidence and fight. We are all certain that we are going to win the National League flag again this year. It is also our belief that we will take the honors in the world's series next Fall. I do not wish to infer that we are overconfident, for such is not the case. We realize that we will have to play hard, fast baseball all of the time in order to win the championship, but the boys are all blessed with a wonderful fighting spirit and will go after everything in sight from the time that the ball sends us away from the park Wednesday until the final tussle has been won or lost in October.

* * *

It has been a pleasure to play with the Braves even in the exhibition contests. The average exhibition game is a slow and uninteresting affair. A big league club usually does not take exhibition encounters seriously and is often beaten by bush league outfits. The Braves, however, have played almost as hard in their exhibition battles as they do in league ball games. They have called into play almost all they know about the national pastime with the result that the club made a fine record in its trip through Dixie.

* * *

Our pitchers, of course, did not extend themselves in the early exhibition tussles. They would have acted foolishly if they had taken any unnecessary chances with their mighty pitching arms. They were still able to put enough "stuff" on the ball to baffle the minor league stars. Dick Rudolph, in particular, had considerable sport at the expense of our opponents. The "Little Master" got into condition very quickly but still refused to use a large number of his dazzling benders. Rudolph, as every baseball "fan" knows, is one of the brainiest hurlers in the business and was easily able to fool our opponents even when he was merely throwing a straight ball.

Mickey Brown to Box Tommy Shea

Mickey Brown, the star Malden boxer, has been matched to meet Tommy Shea, of New Haven on April 19. Brown has started training for the bout and is confident of winning.

BELGIAN BIKER HERE FOR TITLE

New races and new faces will mark the opening of the bike season at the Revere Cycle track on April 19. On that date Victor Linart, the Belgian motor-paced champion, will make his first appearance in the East, meeting Clarence Carman, the national title-holder, and George Wiley, the popular Syracuse boy, in a twenty-five mile race behind the motors.

Manager Nat Butler has arranged a special race for boys, something entirely new to the patrons of the beach oval. He has received a surprisingly large list of entries but will hold open until Wednesday in order to give the late-comers a chance to get into this event, which promises to be one of the most popular ever staged at Revere.

The constant building of new tracks in the East and the retirement of veterans make the demand for new riders bigger and bigger every year. It was with this end in view that Manager Butler decided to put on a new race for boys. The boys took to the new idea like the proverbial duck does to the water. They saw a chance for a big career on the bike track and a chance to make salaries second only to those of baseball. It was no wonder then that the entries poured in as they did.

MANY NEW STARS.

Many new stars will be seen in the amateur and professional races at the beach this season. Some of last year's amateurs have discarded the "simon pure" ranks and have turned "pros."

Linart, three-times Belgian champion, is one of the best as well as one of the most popular riders that ever came out of the old world. He is a star—every inch of him. His record on the foreign tracks speaks for itself. Frank Kramer, American sprint champion, thinks so much of Linart's riding that he has picked the Belgian to win the world's paced championship. Linart came within an ace of winning this title on two occasions and he believes his success is due to come this time.

Linart will have the pick of the motor-paced world to work against at Revere, and if he beats them all there is no doubt about his title.

IS VICTIM OF WAR.

Linart did not come to America because he wanted to. He is a victim of the war. Early one October morning last year the Germans started bombarding Antwerp, Linart's home city, and the rider lost no time in packing up his belongings. He grabbed his wheel and beat a hasty retreat for Ostend. He later was taken to a detention camp in Folkstone, England, from which place he came to America. When Linart landed in New York all he had was a collar and a racing shirt.

But the Belgian is not worrying. He expects to make a fortune on the cycle tracks of America and there is no reason why he can't if he shows the goods.

STAR BIKE CARD ARRANGED FOR OPENING RACES AT REVERE CYCLE TRACK NEXT MONDAY

CARRIGAN SENDS THREE PLAYERS TO THE GRAYS.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., April 12.—The Red Sox are on their way East, passing through this city early this morning. The team will play a game at Richmond tomorrow and then move on to Philadelphia, where the opening game of the championship season will be played on Wednesday.

Some of the players, three pitchers and a catcher, in charge of Heinie Wagner, will break away from the team when the train reaches Washington, and keep right on to Philadelphia, to rest up for the opening series. These players are Dutch Leonard, Ray Collins, Ernest Shore, Forrest Cady and Heinie Wagner.

Leonard is most anxious to pitch the opening game. He is willing to take a chance on his arm, but Manager Carrigan shakes his head and says no risk will be taken with the celebrated left hander.

The arm is not strong as yet. Of course there is a chance that it may feel great on Wednesday, but from present indications Leonard will not be the one to pitch the opening game. This leaves the choice between Ray Collins and Ernest Shore, and it is believed that Shore will be the man finally chosen, with Cady on the receiving end.

Tutweiler, Cooper and Pratt Sent with Grays.

Uncle Bill decided to send Guy Tutweiler, an outfielder; Guy Cooper, the pitcher, and Jerrold Pratt, the catcher, to the Providence club, fulfilling the promise he made Manager Dave Shean at Hot Springs. Tutweiler looked mighty good at the Springs, but he has shown nothing since the last week in March, falling down dismally when called upon to pinch hit. He has lost his batting eye completely, but doubtless will recover it when he gets back to his old club, for he hit mighty well last season as a member of the Grays.

Cooper has shown less form than any of the other pitchers. He is very slow and delivers the ball with this undoubtedly works on the nerves of the men behind him, slowing up all hands. He is an excellent fielder, however, and deserves to succeed.

Pratt appears always to please Pat Haley, the catcher that Carrigan retains with the Red Sox, but will undoubtedly prove a good man for Providence. These three players left Cincinnati aboard the Red Sox special last night and are journeying by way of Cleveland and Buffalo to Providence.

Carrigan's squad is now down to 25 men, the number required by American league rules. It is probable that the Red Sox manager may reduce that squad by one or two men at a later date.

Red Sox Look Slow and Lose to Reds.

The team wound up the series in Cincinnati with a defeat, the score being 13 to 6.

Our boys looked overfed and displayed no life whatever.

Hooper and Lewis were slow in the field, while Janvrin could not unerringly throw to first, consequently they couldn't hit the pink pitching they faced. In all it was a sorry exhibition. The boys will certainly have to do better when the season starts or they will be lost in the shuffle.

Shore, Collins and Mays pitched, the first two three innings each, and Mays two. All showed fine form, Mays especially. He fanned three men with his underhand delivery.

Dale, who pitched the last four innings for Cincinnati, was a former member team, he was on the California trip in 1911.

William Gleason Signed by Lynn

William Gleason of Holyoke, who played shortstop for the Reading Club of the Tri-State League last season, is signed to play with the Lynn New England League team. Gleason will play third base for Lynn and is expected to be a star at the position. Last year he batted .317 and fielded .889.

Bill Bingham Rejoins Harvard Track Team

Bill Bingham, Harvard's fast-traveling quarter-miler, will rejoin the track squad today, having recovered from a combined attack of ptomaine poisoning and a bad cold. Bingham has been resting up for several days at his home in Lawrence and will start in training immediately in preparation for the Penn relay games.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Four new men have been signed as umpires by the International League this season. The full list as given out by President Barrow is as follows:

William B. Carpenter, Robert Hart, John Mullen and Peter Harrison have been retained, while the new umpires are A. J. Cleary and Edward Eckman, who officiated in the Newark State League last year; Frank Brown, from the Three I League, and "Buck" Freeman, from the defunct Tri-State League.

Harvard Battles the Braves Champions in First "At Home"

By JACK CONWAY.

George Stallings, the miracle man of baseball, and his band of peppery Braves are in our midst today. The Champions will make their first 1915 appearance in Boston this afternoon when they battle the honorable Harvard baseball team at Fenway park.

Coach Sexton has a strong, well-balanced team under his command, and he is confident that he will give a good account of itself against the champions of the well-known universe. Harvard men do not believe that their nine will vanquish the Braves, but they still have slight hopes that it will upset the "dope" and breeze in a winner.

The supporters of the Crimson assert that the representatives of their esteemed Alma Mater will give a swell account of themselves against Stallings' men even though they are beaten.

We have always respected the desires and traditions of youthful collegians. Therefore we are not going to state what the Braves declared they would do to the team of Johnny Harvard. The Champions are a game of born sports and they have only the least respect for any man's ball club. They go out to win each game in which they engage regardless of who their opponent is. Therefore we believe that there are breakers ahead for the honorable Crimson baseball team.

BIG WELCOME FOR BRAVES.

A large, enthusiastic crowd is expected to turn out to give the Braves a rousing welcome home. Harvard will naturally have plenty of supporters in the stands, but the regulars will be out to the ball yard in large numbers and will receive their first opportunity of the year to give Gaffney's hired men the once over.

The "fans" will be able to watch most of their favorites in action. There will be the peppery Maranville, the stalwart Schmidt, the fast hitting Connolly, the celebrated Gowdy, crafty Rudolph, mighty James, clever Tyler, Smith, Moran, Whaling, Gilbert and the rest of the gallant crew who won so many honors for Boston in the baseball world last season. Almost all of the Champions' baseball heroes will be numbered among those present and they will probably show the "fans" what may be expected of them during the coming campaign.

Johnny Evers will be among the missing. The keystone king will spend the day with his family in Troy, N. Y., and will not join the Braves until tomorrow.

MAGEE WILL PLAY.

Sherwood Magee will come in for much attention today. The fence buster is one of the latest additions to Stallings' team. Magee is a veteran of the ball field and has made a marvelous record during his long career in the National League. He is classed among the leading all-around players in the game.

Magee is a good fielder, a fair thrower and a clever base runner. It is as a batter, however, that he has won everlasting fame. His terrific smashes for extra bases have made him one of the most feared batters in the National League. The pitchers have plenty to worry about when the honorable Sherwood Nottingham is at the bat with a couple of men on the bases.

Magee has been playing centre field for the Braves and should strengthen the team a great deal. He has been batting in the cleanup position. He has not done much steady work with the bludgeon so far this year, but he is certain to regain his batting eye soon and it will then go hard with opposing pitchers.

FITZPATRICK PLAYS TODAY.

There is another new comer on the Braves' ranks. His name is Eddie Fitzpatrick. He is the young man whom the Braves secured from the Toronto club of the International League. Fitzpatrick is able to play the infield and outfield equally well and should be a mighty valuable man for the Braves to have on the payroll this year. He will make his Boston debut today when he does the honors at second base for the champions in the absence of Jawn Evers.

Dick Rudolph, Gene Cocreham and Dick Crutcher will probably do the hurling for the Braves today. Rudolph has been at home in New York for several days, but he joined the Braves this morning. He is in fine condition for so early in the spring, and it looks as though he would do the hurling for the champions in the opening game of the season against the Phillies Wednesday. Rudolph will probably pitch for only three seasons today. This will enable him to keep his arm in fine condition so that he will be fit to perform at his best in the first tussle of the pennant struggle Wednesday.

USE SECOND STRING PITCHERS.

Cocreham and Crutcher are in good condition and Stallings says that they are both ready to travel over the full route if he desires them to do so at any time. Neither of these men did much work in the box for the Braves last year. They were carried all season and were coached carefully by Fred Mitchell and Stallings. These two experts now say that Cocreham and Crutcher are fit to face any major league ball club.

Jim Mahan is expected to do the spadework in the box for the Crimson. Nattick's celebrated young citizen seems to make good at everything he tackles in the line of sport. Therefore he should make things interesting for the Braves. If Mahan could pitch as well as he can play football, we would chalk up a victory for Harvard, but we are unable to make such an assertion. Consequently we believe that Edward will be very fortunate if he is able to prevent the Braves from getting a big total of runs while he is in the box.

CANCELLED BRIDGEPORT GAME.

The champions arrived in Boston late yesterday afternoon. They were scheduled to play a Sunday game at Bridgeport, Ct., but the tussle was called off on account of wet grounds and cold weather. This enabled Stallings' men to make the trip from Washington to Boston without any stop over at Bridgeport.

The management of the Bridgeport team did not object to the calling of the contest when they examined the condition of the ball park. They realized that the game would not have drawn a very large crowd on account of poor weather conditions and that the "fans" would risk catching colds which might handicap them in the baseball opening games of the National League race. The action of the Bridgeport club is to be commended and presented quite a contrast to the treatment which the Braves received in Atlanta, Ga., where they were forced to play Billy Smith's Southern League outfit on a cold day while rain beat down on the ball field.

TO HOLD MORNING PRACTICE.

Stallings intends to keep his men busy this week and will hold morning practice each day besides the regular workouts before the afternoon tussles.

Secretary Hermann Nickerson is one of the busiest persons in town these days as he is completing arrangements for the opening game of the season with the Phillies Wednesday and for the business in connection with the National League. But as friend Nickerson is one of the original twenty-four a day men he is not showing any ill effects as a result of his labors.

Before closing it might be well to state that Charley Brickley and "Tacks" Hardwick, two of the greatest football players that ever came to a gridiron, will try and prove their value in Harvard's outfield today.

Lajoie Takes Baker's Place in Lineup

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Larry Lajoie has been selected by Connie Mack to take Frank Baker's place as cleanup artist in the batting order.

Murphy, of course, will lead off and Oldring, as usual, is probably the best guess for second man up. As for the third hitter, that is yet unannounced, because some of he position on the club are unsettled.

CHECKER PLAYERS IN BIG TOURNEY

One of the biggest checker meets ever held in New England will commence at 9 a. m. Monday, April 19, at Wells Memorial Hall, 957 Washington street, under the auspices of the Wells Checker and Chess Clubs, the winners of the silver cup last February 22 at the professional men.

The committee in charge have provided a large, interesting and varied program, which will afford the visiting checker players much pleasure witnessing the various events and participating in the different matches.

At 10 a. m. they will start the Masters' Tourney for a purse of $25 in gold. The interes for this event will include some of the best players in the United States—H. Morrell, exchampion of England, a member of the International team—but on the United States side — Charles Lawsen, who defended for the championship of New England with Samuel Grover in 1896, E. C. Watchouse, the present holder of the New England title, Samuel Levins and F. L. McCellan, who tied for the championship of Massachusetts, H. L. Pigeon, of East Boston, another player of International fame, John Steele, of Springfield, considered by many to be the strongest player in Western Massachusetts, William Holden, of Lawrence, E. E. Peck, of Melrose, Michael Kiley and Napoleon Grignon of Quincy.

A match between Boston and New England players, the Bay State tourney with teams from Brockton, Dorchester, Wyde Park, Lynn, Lawrence, Maynard, Malden, Boston Elevated, Post Office clerks and Boston Herman and other special matches are carded.

Big Reception for Braves Friday Night

The champion Braves will be given a public reception by Boston at Convention Hall on Friday evening. A committee of 100 Boston business men have charge of the reception to be given by the Royal Rooters who did so much to make the Braves the World's Series in Philadelphia and Boston last year.

Most of the actors and actresses in the Hub at the different show houses will be present as well as participants in the cabaret show and dancing that will be on hand during the proceedings. State and city executives will be in attendance, and, of course, the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Congressman Gallivan will probably introduce the Braves to the assembly.

Newark Feds' Home to Be Ready Soon

NEWARK, April 12.—There is no doubt now that the home of the Federal League Club at Harrison, N. J., will be ready for the opening game of the season there next Friday.

Although there has been such began only three weeks ago, a squad of 500 men had worked wonders in building an attractive park from a barren territory.

The snowstorm of last Saturday set back the work for three days, but the good weather since then has made it possible to catch up to the schedule.

Trumbull Operated On for Appendicitis

The baseball team will play six games, the lacrosse team four and the tennis team five. The track team will be entered in a meet this evening and the field events.

The day by day schedules of the Harvard teams for the week is as follows:

April 24, baseball team vs. Annapolis baseball team vs. Columbia at New York; track meet in which Harvard, Yale and Princeton will enter; lacrosse team vs. Johns Hopkins and tennis team vs. Bethlehem A. C. at Baltimore.

Billiard Tourney Starts Tonight

With the best list that has ever been entered in this even, the three-cushion tournament to decide the championship of New England gets under way this evening at the Imperial room, with Charlie Warren and Harry Manuel as opponents.

Warren is one of the best experts in Boston at this style of play, and had the record run of 15 points to his credit until Pedro Mezquinne, the Mexican wizard, set up a new one with his memorable run of 16.

With Warren and Manuel will be Fallon, Gillisie, Carroll, Ryder, Dr. Hudson and Ammidon, it wouldn't be surprising if the existing record was equaled or beaten before the tournament ends.

Torrey Resigns as Athletic Director

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—When the board of athletic directors at the University of Pennsylvania convened for its monthly meeting the resignation of Dr. Robert Torrey was handed in by the latter.

The former Penn star gave as his reason for quitting that his business required all his time and that he was sorry that having a realty business necessities required every moment of time he had.

Torrey was a big all-American on the Penn elevens of a few years back, held the captaincy and vice-president and chairman of the ground committee. Torrey has done a great deal to put athletics on a high plane at Penn. John H. Brown was elected to fill the double vacancy.

Speed Kings to Show at Readville Track

All the leading motorcycle racers of fame, from here to the Pacific Coast, will show at the new Readville Motor Park this coming season, where meets will be held every other week, commencing April 19.

Riders will be able to take the corners with throttles wide open and to make up with a lead enough to win many of the professional races carded. The circuit has been oiled with the best material and careful preparation that has made the Indianapolis Speedway such an ideal place for high speed.

Los Angeles Latest to Bid for Olympics

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—The City of Angels is the latest to shy its hat in the ring for the Olympic games in 1916. Los Angeles claims that it could furnish practically as much in entertainment as Philadelphia or New York in addition to offering the best climate in the world for holding in the world.

Abandonment of the games for 1916 is not looked on with favor in this country, even though the great meet should have to be held with fewer nations that usual represented.

Jay Gould Retains His Racquet Title

Jay Gould of the Philadelphia Racquet Club retains his title of national amateur court tennis championship. Gould had but little difficulty in defeating Joshua Crane in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2, at the Tuxedo and Racquet Club. Gould displayed his usual wonderful form and was invincible. Crane put up a clever game but was outclassed.

Willie Ritchie's Sister Charges He Struck Her

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—Willie Ritchie, former lightweight boxing champion, is suffering from an injured head. He has a mean, nasty disposition, he dances like a novice and is money-mad.

This at least is the opinion of Miss Josephine Steffen, Willie's sister, and until a couple of weeks ago, his dancing partner on the eastern stage.

And that isn't the only reason Miss Steffen had for throwing up her job and returning to San Francisco. She charges that, though Willie got $1,500 a week, there was no pay day for her; that he held her so tight during their dances that he nearly cracked her ribs; and that he finally brought about a climax when he struck her in the face during an argument in their dressing room.

"Willie was all right until he got to New York, and was given a popular decision over Freddie Welsh," declared Miss Steffen. "Then he became so different. Success seemed to go to his head. He changed the speech he made as a part of our act and talked about nothing but his hunting desire to bring the lightweight champion back 'to the glorious land of the free.'"

Milton Academy Has Hard Tennis Dates

Manager Joshua Crane, Jr., has arranged a hard schedule for the Milton Academy tennis team this season. Captain Gerald Towle has some fine material available and expects an unusual fine season. The schedule follows: April 29, Boston Latin at Milton; May 4, Brown and Nichols at Milton; May 8, St. Marks at Milton; May 12, Melrose High at Milton; May 17, Brookline High at Milton; May 12, St. George's at Newport; May 29, Middlesex at Milton.

PLAN 'ELKS NIGHT' AT PIN TOURNEY

The monster bowling tournament to be held at Mechanics building from April 29 to May 15, under the auspices of the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association promises to make some alley history.

Big feature nights will be established during the tournament and one of the largest features promises to be that of Elks' night, Monday, May 3, at which time the championship of the world for Elks' Lodges will be established. Handsome trophies will be given in connection with the prize money that is offered for those competing in the tournament.

Already the leading cities in New England have signified their intention of sending a delegation to Boston, and the local Elks are making arrangements to run an open house to welcome and entertain the visiting members.

POEHLER WITH QUINCY LODGE.

The Quincy Lodge of Elks have as a member Paul Poehler, who is known as the champion candle pin bowler of the world, and is looked upon by the bowling zoned as the most likely contender for the world's title for "Hello Billie."

The Elks' Lodge of Washington, D. C., will no doubt give a good account of itself in the duck pin game, as its team is recognized as one of the strongest duck pin teams in the country.

The Mother Lodge of New York city is promised to send a team under the direction of Hugh McQuire that will enter in the ten pin class and no doubt be favorites in the betting for that style of game.

WORCESTER TO SEND TEAM.

The merchants and manufacturers of Worcester held a big boosters' meeting, at which time they voted to subscribe a sum that would be sufficient to send a delegation to accompany their Elks' team, in addition to establishing a "Worcester night," which will no doubt be granted by the tournament committee.

Although the tournament is not to open for three weeks, the city of Boston is bubbling over with enthusiasm in anticipation of the tournament. As things shape up now it looks as though Lodge No. 10 will have no less than 300 teams to represent the Hub.

A Man and His Wife

John Drinks Too Much and Isabel Gets a Shock

Dropping the coat on a chair, she sank on her knees by it, a torrent of sobs shaking her frame.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXXII.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"JOHN!" the wife gasped, recoiling. "Oh, JOHN!"

The look in her eyes sobered the man for a moment. He made an effort to speak naturally, but Isabel saw that he uttered every word carefully. His tongue seemed thick, and he lisped slightly.

"What's the matter?" he queried gruffly. "Why aren't you asleep?"

She did not know what to say or do. Tales she had read of women who undressed their intoxicated husbands and helped them into bed—thereby working wonderful reformations in the characters of these husbands—flashed through her brain. Anecdotes of women who scolded their husbands when they drank, thus losing all influence over them also came hurriedly to her mind. How easy all such advice sounded. She would have supposed that she would know which woman was right in any of these cases. But this was different. This was no story book man before her. This was John, her own husband.

"What's the matter, I say?" he repeated. He moved toward her, swaying awkwardly. She noted how pale his face was and that his hat was tilted over one ear. In pictures of drunken men their hats were always over one ear. She wondered in her subjective mind why too much liquor should set on mats hat awry. Suddenly she found herself saying coldly:

"I wish, John, that you would take off your hat."

He smiled weakly and followed her suggestion. The hair thus uncovered was damp and clung to his forehead. He put up his hand and felt it, then looked at her as if hoping that she did not notice it.

"What makes your head so wet?" she asked, a sharp ring in her voice.

"I had a headache and put water on it to make it better," he replied.

"I advise you to go to bed," she said. Then she stopped. The realization that his bed and hers were side by side came to her. The smell of his breath would sicken her. Well, she would pretend that she was going to sleep in her own bed, and, when he was asleep, she would slip off quietly and lie down somewhere else.

HE WALKS UNSTEADILY TO HIS DRESSING ROOM

She watched him walk unsteadily into his dressing room, then she went back to bed, shivering with a nervous chill. John had never been like this before. Was this the beginning of a career of drunkenness? There was nobody to whom she could go for advice. She was too young to know that such a state as she had just seen her husband in might mean something which would never be repeated, or something which would go from bad to worse. In her inexperience, and with her penalty of looking on the hopeless side of marital infelicities she pictured herself as the wife of a drunkard.

Considering John Hamilton's condition, it took him a surprisingly short time to prepare for the night. In the dim light that shone from his dressing-room door his wife saw him cross the room toward the twin beds. She recalled that she had once laughed when somebody spoke of a man who came home from his club like "a ship tacking before a gale." How could she ever have smiled at such a remark?

"Good night!" John muttered as he lay down.

His wife sat up in bed, then slipped to the floor, putting her feet into her slippers and her wrapper about her trembling form.

"Where you goin'?" he asked drowsily.

"You forgot to put out the dressing-room light," she replied. "I am going to put it out."

He struggled to get up. "I'll do it, dear," he said.

"No," she ordered; "lie still."

"But why?" he protested, sitting up on the side of the bed. "And why do you speak to me so crossly, Isabel?"

She had not meant to say anything to him now of his condition, but her nerves snapped as she looked at the swaying figure. "Because," she explained, harshly, "the place for you is in bed. When a man is drunk that's where he belongs."

"Drunk!" he exclaimed. He sat still, a grotesque figure with tousled hair, peering at her in the uncertain light shining through the open door. "Isabel, you're entirely mistaken. I took only a little punch, but it was strong, and it gave me a headache. That's all. Honestly, dear, that's all."

He held out his hand to her, but she shrank from him.

"Don't touch me!" she shuddered. "Do as I tell you and lie down."

He obeyed meekly, and she stood gazing at him. He had closed his eyes and was breathing heavily before she left the room.

Going into the dressing room, she closed the door of communication and looked about her. John's dress suit lay in a heap on the floor. He was usually so neat that the disorder here spoke loudly of his unnatural condition tonight. Stooping down, the wife lifted the clothes and mechanically folded the trousers. Then she put the coat on a hanger and started toward the closet with it. She felt the touch of the smooth cloth on her bare arm and remembered that she had told John the first time he wore this suit that it was the handsomest one she had ever seen. That was the night on which they were married.

ISABEL HAS A FIT OF REAL WEEPING

Perhaps she was a sentimentalist, for, dropping the coat on a chair, she sank on her knees by it, a torrent of sobs shaking her frame. She was angry no longer. Her whole heart cried out for the affection she felt was slipping from her.

"John! John!" she whispered. "Oh, my dear, I do love you!"

When the storm of weeping had spent itself, she arose and walked towards the door of her own room. Turning the knob softly, she entered. She had thought she would go back there, where she belonged, and lie where she had lain every night since her marriage. Although her husband was sleeping so heavily that he would not know that she was there, she would not leave his side.

But as she went in the sickening odor of the sleeper's whiskey-laden breath assailed her nostrils. For an instant she paused, then, turning quickly, came back into the dressing room, closing the door behind her.

She would sleep on the parlor couch for the few hours left before daylight. She could not bear to go into that bedroom now.

Public Would Like to Study Sky

There Should Be Great Telescopes Where the Vast Mind of the People Could Satisfy Its Intellectual Curiosity

THERE was once great excitement in the kingdom of the moles over the discovery of a peculiar instrument which rendered it possible for them to see something of the world about them. Every one of those blind little animals wished to try the powers of the strange instrument, and the more thought that there was a world around them, of whose existence they had been unaware, awoke their intelligence, widened their minds and stimulated their desire to see it for themselves.

But there were millions of moles and only one instrument of vision. Moreover, a little clique immediately took possession of the single instrument and, on the pretense that they alone knew how to use it, kept every other mole away. In a short time this clique developed into a separate order, speaking a language of their own, which was most unintelligible to their compatriots. They did, however, occasionally talk in the vernacular a little about their discoveries, and this was just sufficient to intensify the desire of the millions to see something of these wonders themselves. But they were kept away from the marvelous instrument more uncharitably than before.

At last an appeal was made to the King of the Moles, and he decreed that another instrument should be made for the purpose of satisfying the public curiosity.

INSTRUMENTS SEIZED.

The making of this instrument was very costly and difficult, and only the resources of the King were competent for the undertaking. There was great rejoicing at the news of the construction of the new instrument—but no sooner was it completed than the same clique seized upon it, and the public saw no more than before. When loud popular protests were heard, representatives of the clique went before the King and persuaded him that they needed the exclusive use of both instruments for the development of a wonderful new science on which they were working. The ignorant rabble, they declared, could not understand these things.

"I don't understand them very well myself," said the King, "but I do understand the desire of my people to experience this new sensation of seeing."

However, the King yielded to the representatives of the clique, chiefly because their learned jargon dazzled him, and so the public were still compelled to learn what they could of the world of sight at second hand.

The same thing was repeated many times, but always the new instruments, constructed at the King's expense, were monopolized by the technicians of the clique.

Finally a poor mole, gifted with more than usual eloquence, sought the King, and said:

"Sire, it is an odium that your royal line that 'seeing is believing.' We, your faithful subjects, are told wonderful things about the powers of these new instruments and the marvels that they reveal, but we are not permitted to see them ourselves. There is a great longing in our souls to partake, if but once in our lives, of this high pleasure, which we feel would do more to emancipate our minds than all the incomprehensible preachments of the clique who have taken exclusive possession of the instruments of sight, and who seem to find more interest in the technicalities invented by themselves than in the plain lessons to be derived from such discoveries."

KING MOVED BY APPEAL.

"We therefore beseech Your Majesty to command the construction of an instrument which all your humble subjects may use to satisfy their laudable curiosity."

The King of the Moles was moved by this appeal, and, in answer to it, went deep into his royal treasury and had an instrument of unprecedented power constructed, which, he commanded, should forever be at the disposal of his subjects who wished to take a glimpse at the visible world, while a few professors from the clique were appointed to show the people how to look.

The consequence was that a beneficent mental revolution occurred in the kingdom of the moles, and the clique found that they, too, had benefited by the change, because now the popular mind understood better what they were about and sympathetically supported them in their abstruse researches.

I have abstracted this short chapter from the history of the moles because of its bearing upon a great question in human evolution. Not a week passes in which I do not hear from some man or woman thirsting for firsthand knowledge about the wonders of the starry universe, and begging to be informed where they can obtain a single look through a powerful telescope. I give them letters of introduction here and there, but the result is almost always the same. "We are too busy."

TELESCOPES FOR PEOPLE.

"Don't bother us; this is no place for sight-seers"—such are virtually the only replies that they get.

Now, of course the astronomers are busy; I know that. But, equally of course, there ought to be a great many more and more than one such telescope, devoted entirely to gratification of the intellectual curiosity of the vast public mind concerning the wonders around us. I hope to see at least one such institution established before I go elsewhere, and some generous millionaire, desirous to benefit his kind, could easily play the part of the enlightened king of the moles by supplying the needed instrument of celestial vision.

Did the Great Napoleon Have a Double?

EVERY student of Napoleon is ready to declare on oath that the Emperor died on May 5, 1821, in his narrow chamber at Longwood, St. Helena. A storm was rolling over the island prison, and on its wings, muttering "France—Army—Head of the Army—Josephine"—the mind dazzling genius of the modern world passed out of his life. To this history posterity has adhered.

Is this the truth? An amazing story published in English asserts that Napoleon died, not at St. Helena, but in Austria. He died, not in his bed, with the faithful remnant of his followers beside him, but alone by an Austrian sentry. A double was at St. Helena, but as an obscure refugee from Italy.

Napoleon had a double. This double, his very image, had more than once been employed by the Emperor to pose for him in one situation or another; sometimes to test the truth of some new story of peril to the great man's life—plots more numerous than history to this day is aware of. To the imperial police the double was known both by sight and by name, though they never saw always of course, in the secret of his comings and goings.

After Waterloo, when the drums of the Old Guard have rolled the news of the last march of the French army of Napoleon—the fallen Emperor, the cup finally at his lips, must sail, an exile to the rock in the Atlantic. But to one, and only one, is the devoted double who gives himself in charge to Captain Maitland of the Bellerophon. The double, who settles down with Bertrand, Montholon, Las Cases, to the appalling dreariness of St. Helena.

And Napoleon? What becomes of him? Napoleon, more or less transformed in style and appearance, withdraws secretly to Florence. In Florence he purchases the shop and little business of an optician, and forthwith enters on the most extraordinary phase of the most extraordinary career in Europe.

He gains the esteem of the neighbors. The disguise of the Man of Destiny must have lacked something, for they perceived in him a notable likeness to Napoleon, and familiarly bestowed on him that name which all civilization empirest. Then, one day, on a sudden, Signor "Napoleone," optician, disappeared. The little shop was closed and shuttered; the little man so curiously resembling the victor of Austerlitz, the victim of Waterloo, no longer stood behind his counter or gossiped in his doorway in Florence, in brief, beheld him no more.

To the new King of France, however, Signor "Napoleone," before departure, had addressed a letter, the contents of which filtered somehow from the throne; and to buy the silence of those persons was had become aware of this missive Louis XVIII distributed a large sum of money.

Almost in the same hour a small and rather corpulent individual, fifty years of age or thereabouts, is fired at and killed by a soldier of the Emperor of Austria while walking on the scale a wall of the park of Schoenbrun.

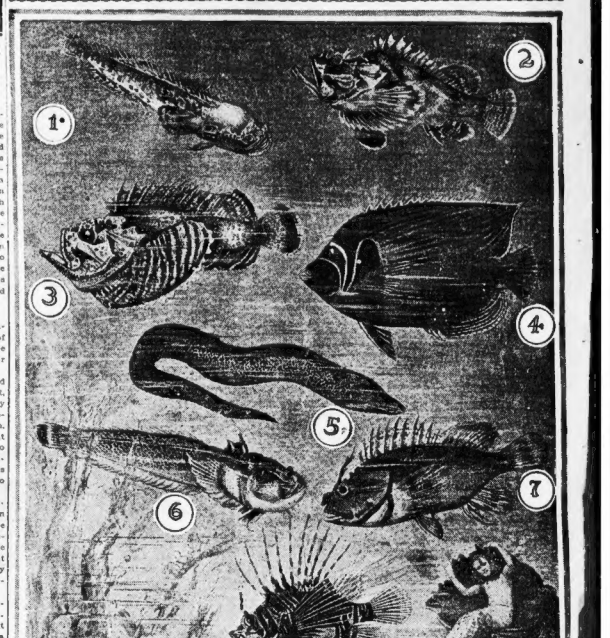
It was at Schoenbrunn, readers will remember, that Napoleon's son and heir, the gentle young Duke of Reichstadt, languished—neglected by his cousin, Marie Louise—in the most wretched of gilded captivities. Napoleon, always pining for a scant and completely false boy, was taken to Schoenbrunn to see him.

Not amazingly, the affair of the sentry's bullet made some stir at the French Embassy. Not unnaturally, the embassy decided to make inquiry of somewhere on the subject.

Then the mysterious narrative of Signor "Napoleone," optician of Florence, and the Emperor Napoleon's double, who dies comparatively contentedly for his master on the rock in the Atlantic, is surely romantic enough for the most imaginative poet that ever yet has sought to translate fable into fact. But there is at least one question to which, we fancy, the majority of readers would like an answer. Who, then, wrote the "Memorials of St. Helena"—Napoleon's testimony to mankind? Was it the work of his double?

Poisoners of the Deep

Some of the Methods by Which Fishes Defend Themselves



1. BATRACHUS GRUNIENS—Emits poison from three spikes on dorsal fin and one on the gill-cover, each of these having a poison-sac at its base; found round the coast of the Antilles.

2. SCORPAENA DIABOLUS—Emits poison from spikes of dorsal and rear fins; found in the Indian and Pacific oceans; the Mediterranean species is an ingredient of Bouillabaisse.

3. SYNANCEA BRACHIO—Exudes poison from spikes on the dorsal fin under pressure; found in tropical parts of the Indian and Pacific Oceans; result of sting, delirium, with a desire to have the part amputated.

4. HOLOCANTHUS IMPERATOR—Passes as poisonous, but there is no proof that it possesses poisonous glands; found in the Malay Archipelago.

5. MURENA HORINGA (LAMPREY)—Poison is in a small pouch in the mouth, and exudes from three fangs like those of a serpent; the poison-glands disappear on death; the poison is a digestive, although Henry I. of England died from eating lampreys found in the Mediterranean and the tropical part of the Atlantic.

6. THALASSOPHERYNE RETICULATA—Poison exudes from spikes on the dorsal fin and gill-cover, each of which has a poison-sac; found at Panama and in the tropical parts of the Pacific.

7. SCORPAENA GRANDICORNIS—Of the same variety as the Scorpaena Diabolus; found in the Indian Ocean and the tropical parts of the Pacific.

8. ARTEMATA — Distinguished from the Scorpaenidae by its longer dorsal spikes, which exude poison; found in Indian Ocean and the equatorial part of the Pacific.

Daughters of Clergymen

Many of Them Have Become Famous

BOTH here and abroad the daughters of clergymen have attained to fame.

Jane Austen first saw the light in the vicarage of Steventon, in Hampshire, in 1775; Mrs. Gaskell, who is famous as the author of "Cranford," was the daughter of William Stevenson, who preached at Dobbape, and her intimate friend, Charlotte Bronte, who, with her sisters, Emily and Anne, took the world by storm, were the daughters of Patrick Bronte, whose church and rectory at Haworth are yearly the mecca of thousands of admirers of these immortal women.

Mrs. Lynn Linton, the Victorian novelist; John Strange Winter, the creator of "Bootle's Baby" and many another tale of the army; and Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, who, with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," struck the deathblow to the slave trade, were all daughters of preachers.

Among the more modern brilliant women are Olive Schreiner, the daughter of a missionary and born in Basuteland, where her father worked, and Mrs. Florence Barclay, who, as it were, sprang into fame in a night with "The Rosary," and who is the daughter of the Rev. Samuel Charlesworth, rector of Limpsfield, Surry. Mrs. Barclay had written singly for the boy of the job," and "The Woman at Home, and it was her sister, Mrs. Ballington Booth, who induced her to send her "stuff" to a publisher.

Jane and Mary Findlater, whose individual and collaborated novels, "The Green Graves of Balgowrie," "The Rose of Joy," etc., have brought them wealth and fame, are the daughters of the late Rev. Eric Findlater, Lochcarnbraid, and their lifelong friend, Mrs. Nigel Robertson, author of "The Gallant Quaker," is the daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Hill, Dundee.

A-K Tablets for Various Forms Of Headache

"It is necessary in order to treat headache properly to understand the cause which produces the affection" says Dr. J. W. Ray of Hopkins, Ala. Continuing, he says: "Physicians cannot even begin the treatment of a disease without knowing what causes it or rise to it, and we must remember that headache is to be treated according to the same rule. We must not only be particular to give a remedy intended to counteract the cause which produces the headaches, but we must also give a remedy to relieve the pain until the cause of trouble has been removed. To answer this purpose Anti-kamnia Tablets will be found a most convenient and satisfactory remedy. One tablet every one, two or three hours gives comfort and rest in the most severe cases of headaches, neuralgiand particularly the headaches of women."

When we have patient subject to regular attacks of sick headache, we should caution him to keep his bowels regular, for which nothing is better than "Antidia," and when he feels the least sign of an oncoming attack, he should take two A-K Tablets. Such patients should always be instructed to carry a few Anti-kamnia Tablets, so as to have them ready for instant use. These tablets are prompt in action, and can be depended on to produce relief in a very few minutes. Ask for A-K Tablets.

Anti-kamnia Tablets can be obtained at all druggists.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels. There's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look on your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

He now has these tablets sold by druggists under the name Olive Tablets. They are a substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by every one, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. Take one at night. All druggists, 10c and 25c per box.

WHOLE FAMILY TORTURED BY ITCHING RASH

Kansas City, Mo.—"My husband had a rash all over his body, and soon the WHOLE FAMILY was in the same condition. It looked scaly and raised up on the arms and body in big bumps. This trouble burned and itched so that it would nearly drive one crazy. It was always worse at night, so we could not sleep.

"We all had this trouble for about two or three years, and during that time tried many remedies and prescriptions with no results. We tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and it RELIEVED AT ONCE, and before the third jar of ointment had been used, we were all completely cured. It has been four months since we were cured, and there are no traces of the trouble." —(Signed) Mrs. S. A. Clarkson, 1530 Lawn Ave., Oct. 24, 1914. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. For trial free, write to Dept. 13-R, Resinol, Baltimore.—Advertisement.

ENROLL IN BIG CONTEST TO-DAY CHANCE TO WIN TRIP TO FAIRS $1,250 IN GOLD FOR WINNERS

Candidates, take notice!

You have until 5 o'clock P. M., next Saturday, April 17, in which to get your Series "A" coupons into the office of the Contest Manager at No. 5 Winthrop square.

If sent by mail they must be sent before 5 P. M. on next Saturday, April 17.

No Series "A" coupons will be counted that are brought in or mailed after that day and hour.

Next Sunday's American will contain a full page of pictures of the various candidates. If you have not yet sent in your photograph, do so at once.

Some day this week the Contest Manager will print, in this column, a complete, detailed itinerary of the trip and that it will be A TRIP DE LUXE in every sense of the word, is the American's promise to you.

Final arrangements for the trips have practically been completed, and the best that money can procure will be provided for the winners.

The winning candidates will not have to think of money—all they will have to do will be to enjoy what can buy, and the American will cheerfully pay the bills, as a generous host is glad to do.

It is a mistaken idea for those who have deferred getting into the race to imagine it is too late. If you enter NOW—TODAY—you will start with your 1000 vote enrollment credit and coupon No. 2 of Series "B"—there are still 13 coupons before Series "B" comes to an end. Then there are 15 coupons in Series "C," 15 coupons in Series "D," 15 coupons in Series "E," 15 coupons in Series "F" and 9 coupons in Series "G."

It will be a happy Fourth of July for the twenty-five winners in this magnificent race, where energy and ingenuity brings such a splendid revenue.

One of the most pleasing phases of this race is the interest evinced by friends and acquaintances of the candidates. It is to friends that contestants must look for support. When you have a lot of people working for you, it means a big step ahead. And they will all be only too willing to help you if you will merely suggest it to them, because it costs nothing for one person to help another in this remarkable competition.

And don't forget that the winning contestants will receive $1,250 in gold, to be divided among the twenty-five fortunate persons who, by their energy and activity, win success in the vote gathering.

Contest Rules

Read Carefully

THE CONTEST—The Boston American's California Expositions Contest is a voting competition which is open to every man, woman and child (over 16 years of age) in New England, except employes of the American and members of families and relatives. The contest begins Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ends Saturday, July 3, 1915.

THE PRIZES—Twenty-five De Luxe trips to the California Expositions and FIFTY DOLLARS in gold to each of the 25 trip winners will be awarded.

TWO CANDIDATES—Every man, woman or child (over 16 years of age), who is a resident of New England, is eligible to compete, except employes of the American as noted above. Participation in the Boston American contest does not debar anyone.

THE 1,000 VOTE CREDIT—Each candidate must be regularly enrolled from his or her permanent address on the enrollment blank printed in the Boston American Daily and Sunday or a copy thereof.

THE VOTES—Every day during the life of the contest, beginning Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ending Saturday, July 3, 1915, a coupon will appear in the Daily and Sunday Boston American which will count 50 votes.

The Daily American coupon will count ONE vote, and the Sunday American coupon will count TEN votes.

The contest will be divided into 7 periods, and the coupons, during each period will be numbered in series as follows:

1st period—Series A No. 1 to A No. 15—appearing March 27 to April 10
2d period — Series B No. 1 to B No. 15—appearing April 11 to April 25
3d period — Series C No. 1 to C No. 15—appearing April 26 to May 10
4th period — Series D No. 1 to D No. 15—appearing May 11 to May 25
5th period — Series E No. 1 to E No. 15—appearing May 26 to June 9
6th period — Series F No. 1 to F No. 15—appearing June 10 to June 24
7th period — Series G No. 1 to G No. 9—appearing June 25 to July 3

DUPLICATE VOTE VALUE will be given for each consecutive SERIES turned in to his one week after the appearance of the last coupon in each SERIES. For example, if part or all coupons numbered Series A No. 1 to Series A No. 15 inclusive will be received at the office of receipt as described below, whereas 15 daily and 3 Sunday coupons not consecutively numbered will count as only 15 votes (their face value). But in any event all the coupons must be turned in within the set time limit. For example, ALL of the coupons numbered Series A No. 1 to Series A No. 15 inclusive (A coupons received after this date and time will be refused; a similar rule applies to the other series).

Votes sent in daily during each period will count only for their face value.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contest ant to another after receipt of same by the American.

The vote value of coupons will remain unchanged throughout the entire contest.

HOW TO SEND VOTE COUPONS—At the end of each contest period, collect all votes of that particular series, then put all your Series A No. 1" coupons together, tie or fasten them in some manner and attach a slip of paper showing the number of "Series A No. 1" coupons contained in that package. Do the same with "Series A No. 2" coupons, and the same with "Series A No. 3," "Series B No. 1," "Series B No. 2," and including Series "G No. 9" the last one of that series. Then wrap them all in one bundle and write or stamp on the outside of this bundle, your name and address and the number of consecutive sets said to be contained therein.

WHERE TO SEND THE VOTES—Bring them to the Expositions Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square (just around the corner from the American's main office at Summer and Devonshire streets), or, if sent by mail, send to American Expositions Contest, P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass.

THE WINNERS—The 25 candidates who receive the largest number of votes will be voted the 25 prizes. In the event of total votes for any contestants who win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any packages unless sent by registered mail or express.

No persons can win more than one prize.

The American reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency that may arise. The Contest Manager will decide all disputed questions carefully and in good faith, and his decisions will be final and conclusive.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editer

Stocks were not so strong and active at the opening this morning as during the final session of last week. It was reported from New York there was considerable liquidation and commission houses were sellers in many cases on the bid prices. Missouri Pacific was active and strong among rails.

Among early declines in New York were Canadian Pacific 1¾, Southern Pacific ¼, Reading ½, Lehigh Valley ½, American Telephone ½, American Can ¾, American Smelting 1½, Goodrich ¾, Studebaker 1, Baltimore & Ohio ¾ and Union Pacific ¾. Among gains were Missouri Pacific 1¾, New Haven ½, Amalgamated ¾, Bethlehem Steel 2 and General Motors 1. After half an hour the market grew stronger and recoveries were general.

In Boston Boston & Maine was unchanged and New Haven up ¾. Declines included United Fruit ¼, Copper Range ¼, Granby ⅛ and North Butte ¼. Among gains were Butte & Superior ½, St. Mary's ½ and Shoe Machinery ⅛.

RISE OF EQUIPMENT STOCKS.

The recent rise in the securities of concerns whose business it is to supply railroads with equipment is not based alone upon present business but on trade prospects as well. There is general belief that railroads will do a great deal of equipment buying this year. They are in need of locomotives, rails and everything else. Better earnings are in sight.

The banking and brokerage firm of Thompson, Towle & Co. expires by limitation on May 1 and W. P. Barcholomew, for five years a member of it, will become a partner in the new house Tucker, Hayes & Barcholomew, which will succeed Tucker, Hayes & Co., and occupy the present office of Thomson, Towle & Co. W. B. Thompson and George W. Towle will retire, but Mr. Towle will retain his seat on the Boston Stock Exchange.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

For the week ended Saturday last New York exports totalled nearly $58,500,000 and imports almost $17,500,000. Compared with the imports of the corresponding 1914 week there was a slight gain, but exports increased nearly $8,000,000.

The operations of the Miami Copper Company in 1914 gave it a net profit of $1,363,629, compared with $1,354,835. In 1913. After paying three dividends last year a surplus of $25,413 remained, compared with a deficit of $234,092 after paying four in 1913.

The Bank of Germany reports a gain of 9,891,000 marks in gold for a week.

Net earnings of the Tennessee Copper Company for 1914 were $902,941, compared with $1,254,425 for the previous year.

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY

To holders of extended three-year six per cent. secured gold notes, due June 1, 1915:

The new Board of Directors elected by the stockholders at their recent annual meeting are seeking, through a special committee, thoroughly to acquaint themselves with the Company's condition and needs, with a view to the preparation and submission to the security holders of a comprehensive financial plan which will adequately provide for the future and enable the Missouri Pacific System fully to take advantage of its strong position in the rapidly developing territory which it serves. Manifestly no such plan can be perfected and consummated by June 1st next, when the Company's $24,845,000 Extended Three-Year Six Per Cent. Secured Gold Notes mature.

Noteholders are accordingly requested to extend their notes for a period of one year upon the collateral by which they are now secured, and at the rate of interest (six per cent.) which they now bear. A cash commission of one-half of one per cent. upon the face value of the notes will be paid to noteholders upon the extension becoming operative.

An agreement providing for the extension and executed by the Company will be lodged with the Union Trust Company of New York, as Trustee under the agreement securing the notes. This agreement (copies of which may be obtained from the Trustee or from the Company at its offices in New York and St. Louis) provides as follows:

(A) The withdrawal of pledged collateral upon the substitution of other collateral as provided in Article IX. of the original trust indenture is not permitted and the rates for the withdrawal of collateral for cash deposited with the Trustee shall be the rates hereinbefore fixed by, or pursuant to, that indenture.

(B) Until payment of the extended notes, the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company shall not be permitted to issue additional bonds, notes or other obligations, except for the purpose of providing for taxes, equipment and equipment obligations, terminal commitments and current operations.

(C) The extended notes are to be subject to redemption on the first day of any month, upon four weeks' published notice, at their face value plus accrued interest and a premium of one per cent.

(D) The extension shall become binding only when declared operative by resolution of the Company's Board of Directors or executive committee.

For all notes deposited subject to the extension agreement, with the June 1, 1915, interest coupon attached, the Union Trust Company of New York, or other depositaries which may be designated by it, will issue transferable certificates of deposit entitling the holder to receive, without expense:

(A) Upon the extension becoming operative, an equal principal amount of the extended notes (with new interest coupons attached), together with check for the interest due June 1, 1915, and for the cash commission of one-half of one per cent; or

(B) In case the extension shall not become operative, the return of deposited notes with the June 1, 1915, coupon.

Whether the extension shall become operative as well as in that of the property, promptly to deposit their notes, so that the Board of Directors may be in a position to proceed with their plans for strengthening the financial position of the Company.

Clears Skin—Stops All Blood Troubles

Goes Right Down to Where the Germs Start From.

The action of S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is notable in the skin. It is but natural that blood impurities should show on an outlet. Water, gas, oil and nearly all the active products of nature seek the surface. It seems to be a cosmic law. Even our thoughts will undertake to find expression. And so whatever we take into our system will eventually come out changed in form, converted often into some other substance, but constituting always either waste or that which has served its useful purpose and must be eliminated. And the skin is the principal avenue for escape of certain kinds of poisons. If the skin and blood be healthy these wastes pass off as vapor or perspiration. But impure blood loads the skin with eczema, pimples, scabs, blemishes, rash, fever blisters, blood tetters and other eruptions. And S. S. S. has been found the very best, safest and most effective remedy to purify the blood and thus restore the skin to clear and attractive health. Get a bottle today of any druggist, but be emphatic. Do not allow anyone to hand you a substitute. Wrapped around the bottle is an interesting circular that tells you how to obtain skilful advice free on any subject concerning the blood. S. S. S. is prepared only by The Swift Specific Co., 113 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Look for this name on the package.

TOUR CANDIDATES' PICTURES SUNDAY

The Contest Manager announces today another event of importance in the AMERICAN'S California Tour Competition:

A full page of candidates' photographs will be published in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

The important thing for each candidate to remember is that every full set of fifteen consecutively numbered coupons counts double.

This DOUBLE VOTE VALUE will undoubtedly win the wonder prize for the twenty-five who are sufficiently interested to appreciate the value of the contest's saving plan and who get out and hustle for these De Luxe Trips—and they are well worth of anyone's efforts.

Further details about this remarkable contest appear elsewhere in this paper today. Turn to it now.

Here Is a Picture to Show to Young Men, Old Men and All Whiskey Victims

The Devil's Best Trick Is the Phrase, "I Can Stop When I Want To."

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

In the picture on this page Clifton Meek preaches a temperance sermon that should do good to millions.

Tell the young man who drinks to look at this moving picture of another man who also thinks he "can quit drinking any time."

Every man of fifty has seen this picture in real life—too many have been in the picture themselves.

What whiskey does most cunningly is to lie to its victims.

It makes men feel better, because it makes them feel LESS.

Men drink in order to stop feeling. Thought, anxiety, poverty, nervousness, ALL ARE "HELPED" BY WHISKEY.

That is to say, the man who takes the whiskey is helped to reach more quickly the day when he will quit. That day is illustrated in the last of this series of pictures.

Whiskey and all the other strong alcoholic drinks are rank poisons.

They destroy the will, undermine health, deceive and degrade the intelligence.

In the first of these pictures, a young man, clean cut, and still safe, says with perfect sincerity, "I can quit drinking any time."

In the third of the pictures the same man, showing the effects of whiskey, says, JUST AS SINCERELY, "I can quit drinking any time."

In the last picture he DOES quit drinking.

Every man, fortunately, CAN stop taking poison if he will. But he can stop only once, and that is NOW.

He must stop NOW, or stop as the poor man in this picture did, UNDER GROUND.

Under this picture, when he sent it, Clifton Meek wrote: "And it came to pass," an excellent caption. It does come to pass—the stopping comes, sooner or later.

Of all those that say, "I can stop," every one will stop some day. Lucky day if he can stop NOW.

What whiskey does and means the artist has put in the following fourteen words which he sends us. Every one of those words is written into whiskey. Read them, and read downward the beginning of each word:

WITHERED	WITS
HOPELESS	HELL
INEVITABLE	ILLNESS
SHAMBLING	STEPS
KNEELING	KINDRED
ENTICING	ENEMY
YIELDING	YOUTH

This Man Took His Mother's Advice and Became Rich

The Counsel She Gave Her Son Was Good and Is Good for Everyone. Read This Editorial and Learn What It Was and Profit by It Too If You Can.

A multi-millionaire, born in Boston of poor parents, was sitting in a cozy corner of a clubhouse recently chatting with a few friends who admired his wonderful business successes. One of them asked him what advice he would give a young man about to start out upon his career. This great business man made this significant reply:

"I would repeat as nearly as I can remember the words my mother spoke to me as she bade me goodbye when I was leaving home to take my cold plunge into the world. Her parting advice was: 'If you are able to save any money, put it into land, which God made and which the schemers cannot take away from you.' I never forgot her advice and I consider the best and most profitable of my investments to be those in land or having their security based upon land."

It requires no argument and no especial experience to appreciate the truth of what that man's mother told him. She was a poor woman with limited opportunities, but the truth was so plain that her instincts seized it.

If you put your hard earned money intelligently into real estate, you are making the safest of all investments. But there is no investment which is safe if it is NOT intelligently made. There are "schemers" often in the real estate business and men DO lose money through their schemes. In New York great parcels of land were sold on Long Island and in other sections near New York to foolish people who did not even have the intelligence to look at the land they were buying. These unintelligent people lost their money. In one respect, they deserved to lose it. There are numerous agents of such land promotion frauds operating in Boston. We should all beware of them.

But the point which the AMERICAN makes is that in no other investment is there so much safety as in buying real estate IF you take the trouble to investigate what you are buying.

If you buy stocks or bonds or an interest in a business or make almost any other investment save in the land, you are obliged to take somebody's else opinion almost entirely concern-

Ten Million Men Say It---"I Can Quit"

I CAN QUIT DRINKING ANY TIME!
I CAN QUIT DRINKING ANY TIME!
I CAN QUIT DRINKING ANY TIME!
"I CAN QUIT DRINKING ANY TIME!"
CLIFTON MEEK

They CAN quit, and they all DO. But many of them stop their trade with alcoholic poison, as the man in this picture stopped—when they stop living.

Every man "can quit," but there is only one time to stop, and that is NOW. What you cannot do NOW, you will not be able to do when you are weaker.

The World's Greatest Schoolmaster

By ELBERT HUBBARD

ARISTOTLE lived three hundred and fifty years before Christ. He was a native of Macedonia, which was then a province of Greece.

When a boy of seventeen he walked to Athens, a distance of over two hundred miles, in order to attend the school of Plato.

Aristotle had been a mountain guide and a mountain climber, so a little walk of two hundred miles was nothing to him.

All of his life he was an out-of-door man.

Plato and Aristotle were associated as pupil and teacher and then as fellow-teachers for over thirty years. They finally separated on the relative value of Poetry vs. Science.

Aristotle was the world's first scientist. He made the world's first geological collection; the first herbarium, and the first zoological garden—barring that of Noah.

Very much of our present scientific terminology goes back to Aristotle.

We have busts in bronze of Aristotle, modelled from life by his pupils.

His head was not remarkable for size, neither were his features handsome. He was always a workingman. His form was lean and bony, his hands large and strong.

The plan of teaching adopted by Aristotle was so simple that the school board of Athens could not understand it, and finally Aristotle was exiled from Athens. He taught by setting his pupils to work; they collected natural specimens and talked about them. He was the friend and companion of his pupils. Instead of disciplining them he loved them.

Aristotle said: "The land that produces beautiful flowers, and luscious fruits will also produce noble men and women."

That is to say, man is a product of soil and sunshine, just as much as is the tree. Man's body is over 70 per cent. water. Man gets his strength from food evolved from the ground, and more, perhaps, from the electricity in the atmosphere.

Alfred Russell Wallace says that man's first education came through the domestication of animals. Through the responsibility of caring for animals, and the exercise of forethought for their protection, he evolves himself.

Friedrich Froebel, who was a forester before he was a school teacher, said that through the care of flowers and trees men evolved their own spiritual natures. Years after he had said this, Froebel was surprised to find that Aristotle, twenty-three centuries before, had said the same thing.

Prayers for rain are good, but an irrigating ditch is more reliable.

The nations that have made the greatest impress on civilization have been those that lived in dry and arid districts and not those located amid the bounteous natural gifts near the swamps and jungles where things grow lush and lusty.

On the arid plains the danger of miasma and disease are minimized. By the aid of irrigation man controls the supply of moisture. He plants the things he cares for. He selects, rejects, crosses, breeds and devotes his talents to scientific cultivation.

Egypt was a land of canals. Assyria grew great, prospered and ruled the world because she knew how to apply water to desert land.

Egypt and Assyria went down to their death when their citizens forsook their gardens and flocked to the cities to have a good time, leaving the land where grew the flowers and fruits to slaves.

Greece grew great on taxes from men who knew how to irrigate. The climate and soil of Greece was the same as that of California—vast mountains and arid plains.

Through the garden of Plato ran a diverted stream, whose waters were cold and sparkling, from the mountains.

Plato was under the ditch; for Academus, who owned the ranch, had banked his all on a canal which finally made him one of the millionaires of Athens.

Here it was that Aristotle lived, where the sky was blue three hundred days in the year, amid the lavish and laughing luxuriance of land where God supplied the sunshine and man the water.

Here it was that he wrote, "The land that produces beautiful flowers and luscious fruits will also produce noble men and women."

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

A Few Well-Known Liars

YOU know Bliggs, the famous after-dinner speaker
Who consumes a week in writing an address
And another week devotes to collecting anecdotes
Of the sort that make such efforts a success.
When they work down to his number on the program
And he's called upon to start his little screech,
He will hem and haw and hum and exclaim: "I'm overcome;
I'm wholly unprepared to make a speech!"

YOU know Juggs, the justly celebrated highbrow
Who's afraid the world won't understand his views
And who always sticks around where reporters can be found
In the hope that he'll be mentioned in the news.
If by any chance he figures in a story
He observes in righteous anger: "What a shame!
Here I'm mentioned once again in a list of public men;
How ever do these papers get my name?"

YOU know Mabel Mudd, the amateur contralto
Who has always got her music roll along
And who'd get a fit of pique that would last her for a week
If her hostess didn't ask her for a song.
When at last they drag her toward the grand piano,
She observes as with a cough she clears her throat:
"Really, truly, I don't see why you want a song from me;
I assure you that I cannot sing a note."

Safety First

Despite her mobilization Italy continues discreetly to shinny on her own side of the Alps.

THE STATUE

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, The Star Company.

A GRANITE rock in the mountain side
Gazed on the world and was satisfied.
It watched the centuries come and go,
It welcomed the sunlight yet loved the snow,
It grieved when the forest was forced to fall,
Yet joyed when steeples rose white and tall
In the valley below it, and thrilled to hear
The voice of the great town roaring near.

When the mountain stream from its idle play
Was caught by the mill wheel and borne away
And trained to labor, the gray rock mused
"Tree and verdure and stream are used
By man the master, but I remain
Friend of the mountain and star and plain,
Unchanged forever by God's decree
While passing centuries bow to me."

Then all unwarned with a mighty shock
Out of the mountain was wrenched the rock.
Bruised and battered and broken in heart
It was carried away to the common mart.
Wrenched, and ruined in peace and pride,
"Oh, God is cruel," the granite cried,
"Comrade of mountain, of star the friend,
By all deserted—how sad my end."

A dreaming sculptor in passing by
Gazed on the granite with thoughtful eye.
Then stirred with a purpose supremely grand
He bade his dream in the rock expand.
And lo! from the broken and shapeless mass
That grieved and doubted, it came to pass,
That a glorious statue of priceless worth
And infinite beauty adorned the earth.

This Man Took His Mother's Advice and Became Rich

ing the value and safety of your investment. But in real estate, the facts are as plain TO YOU as to anybody else if YOU will take the trouble to look into them. In almost every other investment you have to let SOMEBODY ELSE judge for you.

If you buy real estate in a locality with which you are acquainted you will almost surely be safe. Get all the information you can from others, but protect yourself by getting all the facts yourself and forming your own opinion.

A real estate investment not only yields a safe and comfortable return, but it stimulates the habit of saving. It helps to give us stability. A great majority of those families which have obtained an independence through saving have begun the good work by an investment in real estate; usually by buying a home.

In a hundred ways it is desirable for you to own your own home, both in your own interest and in that of the general community. It helps you to take a greater interest in your city or town government, because you SEEM to have a greater stake in good government.

It is not true that you pay more taxes after you own your house than you did while you paid rent, for the rent payer pays the taxes on the house. Yet you get the tax bill if you own the house and you KNOW that you are paying the tax, while the rent payer often forgets that HE too pays the tax.

The next few years will probably see a great boom in real estate. The losses in stocks and bonds which people have suffered during recent years tend to turn their minds toward real estate. It will be a more popular investment. The coming electrification of our railroads and the interurban street railway lines will make it easier for men to work in the city and live in the country. It is in the country that the impulse to own our own home is the strongest. We become more attached to the soil. We like the garden. The neighborhood has an attraction of its own that is unknown in the city. We know our neighbors better and like them better.

What present does a sensible woman appreciate more than the gift of a home from her husband. It is "twice blest. It blesses him that gives and her that takes." It satisfies a primeval instinct in man, who has struggled in war and peace to own a part of the earth itself. Because it is natural, it is wise and right.

Science for Workers

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—How has it been determined that our solar system is travelling northward at a rate of twelve miles per second?

A.—This fact has been determined by means of one of the most remarkable laws in the entire history of science, Doppler's law of light. Stand by a railway track and listen to the approach of a rapid train. As it approaches the bell or whistle will increase the pitch of its sound, and instantly lower the pitch or tone after it passes and recedes. When coming more waves enter the ear and less when it is departing.

Light consists of the action of waves on the retina of the eye. Our earth and sun, all bodies in the solar system, are moving to a point in the celestial vault, not far from the star Vega in the constellation Lyra, and, of course, receding from the opposite point of the sky. Waves entering the slit of the spectroscope from the northern stars are compressed, i. e., more enter per second and are dispersed toward the violet end of the spectrum, less enter from the southern stars and are dispersed toward the red.

Now, exalted mathematics, based on the laws of light, determine the extent of dispersion of waves toward the red or violet for each decrease or increase of motion of light emitting bodies, and the amount actually found by experiment confirmed the mathematical formulas. A proof that modern mind is expressing at a very exalted rate.

As a rule, vanity, to exist, does not require food of a very substantial order.
